HERE IS HOW AUGMENTATION WILL TAKE PLACE

NEW objectives for a phased build-up of Regular officer strength in the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps have been set by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson and approved by President Eisenhower, subject to enactment of legislation now at the Capitol.

The following table shows how the build-up will take place over the next seven years. The parenthetical figures show the percentage of Regular officers to the over-all officer strength in each service. All figures are for the end of the fiscal year.

	1955	1958	1963	Total Authorization
Army	26,280 (25.6)	35,640 (36)	39,600 (40)	49,500 (50)
Navy	28,900 (43)	32,280 (48)	33,625 (50)	33,625 (50)
Marine Corps	8,474 (49.5)	8,550 (50)	8,550 (50)	8,550 (50)
Air Force	23,810 (17)	49,986 (36)	55,540 (40)	69,425 (50)

Regular Commissions Open To Reservists Of "All Grades" Under Augmentation Plan

Reservists in all ranks are eligible for permanent Regular commissions under the terms of the new Armed Forces Regular Augmentation bill introduced in the House this week.

The Pentagon said officers will be integrated in "appropriate" grades but declined to spell out details showing the ranks in which integration will take place. A Defense spokesman said only that the Army and Air Force need additional appointment authority "to fill requirements in the higher grades."

The proposal authorizes an added 73,000 Regular officers for the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps.
Approximately 50,000 of this number will be added to the Services during the next seven years.

The Marine Corps, with Regulars and Reservists already on a near 50-50 basis, will add less than 100 officers to its Regular ranks; the Navy, whose Regulars currently total 43 per cent, will add about 5,000; the Army, with 25.6 per cent Regulars, will add 13,320; and the Air Force, with 17 per cent Regulars, will add 31,730.

Reserve officers "of all grades"—both on and off active duty—as well as selected qualified civilians, are eligible "for appointment in appropriate permanent grades," the Pentagon said.

Free Medi-Care Insurance Is Possibility; Out-Patient Treatment Could Be Dropped

(Retired Medical Care, Page 29)

The possibility of free medical insurance for military families was raised this week as the Kilday House Armed Services Subcommittee opened hearings on the Dependent Medical Care Bill.

A Pentagon task force told the Subcommittee that it might cost no more for the Government to furnish free insurance than it would to have the Serviceman pay a monthly premium with the attendant cost of paperwork.

The medical care insurance program would supplement care now being provided in military hospitals and medical facilities.

Defense officials estimated that the insurance—designed principally for families living remote distances from military installations—will cost members of the Armed Forces $4.50 to $4.80 per month for coverage of wives and children. Considerably higher rates ($18 to $19 per month for a parent) were quoted for other dependents.

The insurance plan includes unlimited out-patient care, but no drugs or prescriptions on an out-patient basis, such as those currently furnished through military facilities.

The Pentagon said various insurance underwriters and group health organizations suggested that elimination of out-patient treatment would reduce the cost "to such a degree that the insurance might not require any contribution from the service member."

Chairman Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex) indicated that the Subcommittee will want to explore such possibility carefully. He recalled that Congress had found it cheaper to pay the total cost of the $10,000 GI life insurance program than to handle the administrative burden of charging Servicemen a premium.

The main purpose of the proposed legislation (HR 7994), Congressman Kilday said, "is to provide better medical care for dependents on a uniform basis throughout all of the Services."

Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson submitted a statement to the Subcommittee in which he declared that "there

COFS HAS SLOGAN

General Maxwell D. Taylor, USA, says that new advances in technology will place greater demands on leadership qualities among Army officers. Speaking 21 Jan. at The Citadel, where General Mark W. Clark, USA-Ret., is president, the Chief of Staff observed:

"... I urge the adoption of a slogan reflecting the need for constantly improved military leadership. If we are to survive as a nation, we can afford only an Army which is an Army second to none, with leaders second to none."

"That is why I say our national slogan should be, 'Let us put the best heads of America into the Army caps of tomorrow.'"

LEAVE IS CUT

Increased responsibilities for air-sea rescue activities have forced the Coast Guard to reduce the liberty granted to men on these assignments. A detailed story on Page 35 tells how the stepped-up workload is causing personnel difficulties.

PROMOTION PACE

The Army has announced new temporary promotions to colonel, lieutenant colonel and major, published on page 4.

It is learned that the Army will make officer promotions on a once-a-month basis, probably before the 15th, according to present plans.

DoD Wants Millions For Family Housing

The Defense Department has asked Congress to authorize almost $80 million for family housing construction and increase by $150 million the present limit on use of funds from sale of surplus commodities for quarters overseas.

These requests are made in a $2,012,283,000 public works bill, which reached Capitol Hill on 19 Jan.

The public works money would provide 3740 units, with thousands of other units to be provided by expansion of the surplus commodity program from the present ceiling of $100 million.

KEEP FEET WET

Although this is an age of specialization, Representative Dewey Short (R-Mo) hopes Navy men will continue to "occasionally get their feet wet."

The ranking minority member of the House Armed Services Committee made the remark as the Committee favorably reported a bill to erase sea duty qualifications for Navy officers up for promotion.

Mr. Short hopes Navy personnel "will know about the sea" and the sea service "will not be filled with a lot of landlubbers." (Details on page 3.)

New Tax Credit Law Will Save More Than $11 Million For Service Retired

President Eisenhower is expected to give his approval early next week to a new tax credit law which will save more than $11 million annually for retired military personnel.

The legislation (HR 7036), passed by the House last session and by the Senate last week, is now at the White House.

It permits retired military personnel, regardless of age, to earn up to $1200 in outside income and take full tax credit on $1200 of their retirement pay.

Retired personnel who are 72 or older may earn outside income without limitation under the terms of the measure.

At present, under section 37 of the 1954 income tax code, a retired Serviceman is granted a credit against his tax liability equivalent to the tax, at the first bracket

The Journal Sights The Week In National Defense

THE MILITARY BUDGET for the year starting 1 July 1957 was launched on its extended legislative path this week, as Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson led a top-echelon team of Pentagon officials in closed-door testimony before the House Appropriations Committee. In an election year, both the House and Senate will want to get the military budget out of the way by early June if possible, thus setting the stage for adjournment and a busy summer of political conventions and campaigning. Most observers do not foresee any major skirmishes on the budget front, although it is certain that Democrats and Republicans alike, but particularly the former, will question military chiefs closely as to the adequacy of funds provided for the respective Services.

GENERAL NATHAN F. TWINING CAN COUNT on detailed interrogation in view of published articles that Air Force requests for funds were cut substantially. Concerned over the impact of these stories, the Air Force Chief of Staff found it advisable late last week to issue a statement in which he said that "I have no other thought than that I shall support the budget that is before the Congress." Some newsmen had suggested that Gen. Twining might protest publicly the cutback in Air Force requests, but it is generally believed he will tell Congress that, of course, the Air Force could use more money but is satisfied that the $16.5 billion expenditures for fiscal '57 will provide for urgent needs.

THE AIR FORCE IS CONCERNED, however, over cuts made at three levels in its request for Maintenance and Operation funds, both for the current year and for the year starting 1 July. First of all, the Defense Department reduced Air Force estimates; then Congress cut M&O funds; and finally, the Budget Bureau has been withholding money, approved by Congress. As a result, the Air Force has been forced to curtail flying hours. This situation, if brought forcefully to the attention of Congress, could provoke controversy between the Legislative and Executive branches of Government.

AIR SECRETARY QUARLES has conceded that the Soviets may surpass the Air Force in certain defense categories, but he indicated satisfaction with the Air Force budget in a speech delivered in New York City on 25 Jan. and reported on Page 35. On that page, there are also related remarks by Admiral Arthur Radford, USN, Chairman of the JCS.

THE BUDGET HEARINGS also are certain to find Secretary Wilson and other Pentagon leaders questioned closely about the charges made by General Matthew B. Ridgway, USA-Ret., former Chief of Staff of the Army, in a series of articles being published in the Saturday Evening Post. He reports that politics has played too prominent a role in affecting military decisions. General Ridgway's outspoken views will put his successor, General Maxwell D. Taylor, USA, somewhat on the spot. General Taylor is reported reliably to have achieved, with the aid of Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker, a much smoother day-to-day relationship with Secretary Wilson than existed between General Ridgway and the Defense Secretary. The Army high command, though disappointed that it was denied new obligatory money for major procurement for the third straight year, appears generally satisfied with the fiscal '57 budget. General Taylor is given large credit for this situation, by virtue of his presentations to Secretary Wilson and his explanation of the inevitable budgetary "facts of life" to his subordinates.

ON CAPITOL HILL, the House Armed Services Committee this week was moving along in good stride on military legislation, as reflected in action on the Family Medical Care Bill (Page 1) and its completion of hearings on Naval Promotion Legislation (Page 3). A round-up of activity in Congress and the Legislative Calendar are published on Page 11. In the Senate, however, it's a different story, with the Armed Services Committee thus far confining its work largely to briefings by Pentagon chiefs. In the House Committee, action on the Family Medical Care Bill will be followed by consideration of the measure to raise pay of physicians and dentists by as much as $76 per month and by the new Augmentation Bill (Page 1), which seeks to add thousands of officers to the Regular Army and Air Force.

THE AMERICAN MEDICAL ASSN. has come out in support of the bill to raise the pay of physicians and dentists by providing added constructive service. In the past, the Armed Services Committees have been reluctant to grant such credits, particularly when it means extra money, but the powerful backing of the A.M.A. will boost greatly the chances for passage of the new legislation, which has White House support. The Pentagon has yet to make known its plans for improving career opportunities for nurses, also in serious short supply. The President has indicated that there will be such action for members of the Army, Navy and Air Force Nurse Corps. THE JOURNAL will publish next week a detailed story on the nurse situation in the Armed Forces.

HOPES FOR RETIRED SERVICE legislation in the present session of Congress are encouraged by the speedy Senate action on the House-passed measure which provides added income tax benefits for many persons on military retired lists. The Administration has yet to come forward with a promised bill to ease "Dual Restriction" limitations, but it is reported (Page 31) that the Services are urging liberalized rules for employment in civilian capacity of retired physicians and dentists.

FORMER MARINE CORPS Commandant, General Lemuel C. Shepherd, Jr., USMC-Ret., shows no signs of inactivity following his New Year's retirement. He becomes Chairman of the Inter-American Defense Board this Spring, and, as reported on Page 30, the former Leatherneck Commandant, takes over next week as Grand Paramount Carabao. A cartoon done by Capt. Earle Chesney, USNR, of the White House staff, shows General Shepherd "in action" in his Carabao assignment.

A SPECIAL REPORT by Lt. Gen. C. E. Byers, Commandant of the NATO Defense College in Paris, on Page 22, recounts how senior officers from NATO nations are receiving top-level instruction. General Byers is the first American Commandant of the College.

THE AIRPOWER ACCENT in strengthening NATO was pointed up with the arrival in Germany of the first contingent of the 11th Airborne Division from Ft. Campbell, Ky., and the Air Force disclosure that this month would see the start of a program to convert USAF fighter units from F-86 Sabrejets to F-100 Super Sabres. This deployment marking the first overseas assignment in strength of Century Series supersonic fighters "will prove a major factor in bolstering NATO's Defense Forces," the Pentagon said. The first squadron to receive the F-100's will be the 45th in French Morocco, which will train pilots for other units. It will take about six months to complete the conversion program. The Army's 11th Airborne, which will be the first division of its kind ever assigned overseas in peacetime, replaces the 5th Infantry Division in the Augsburg-Munich area, with the 5th shifting to Ft. Ord, Calif.

Col. Replaces B.G.

Maj. Gen. W. Preston Corderman, Acting Chief Signal Officer, has announced appointment of Col. Kenneth F. Zitzman, USA, as Chief of the Personnel and Training Division in the Office of the Chief Signal Officer, Washington, D. C.

Colonel Zitzman succeeds Brig. Gen. James Dreyfus, USA, who recently became Chief of the Procurement and Distribution Division, Office of the Chief Signal Officer.

WAVEs Nominated

President Eisenhower has sent to the Senate the nominations of six WAVE officers for permanent promotion to Commander and Lieutenant Commander. They are:

Commander, Line—Sybil A. Grant and Ethel A. Weyant.

Commander, Supply Corps—Margaret W. Mayes.

Lt. Comdr., Line—Laura E. Wintersteen, Jan G. Fisher and Ruth M. Streeter.

Nominates Air Secretary

The President has nominated Donald A. Quarles to be Secretary of the Air Force and Mansfield D. Sprague to be General Counsel of the Defense Department.

Both officials currently are serving in recess appointments.

President Names Col. Person

President Eisenhower has nominated Col. John L. Person, CEC, to be a member of the Mississippi River Commission.

O.K. PAY RAISE

A House Armed Services Subcommittee has approved a pay raise for six-month-trainees in the new Reserve program.

A measure (HR 8107) favorably reported by the Brooks Subcommittee this week increases the $50 pay limitation for trainees to $78. It carries a retroactive date of 9 Aug., date of enactment of the Reserve Forces Act.

ARMY RETAINS ONCE-A-MONTH PAY

The Army has decided to stay on a once-a-month pay basis. The decision was made following an "exhaustive study" of a proposal to follow the Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps in paying troops twice a month.

The Army said such a procedure would require more than 600 additional finance personnel at a cost of about $3 million and would not be practicable for combat operations or forces at isolated facilities.

New Army Generals? Name New 3-Star

The President soon may nominate a new group of Army officers for temporary one-star and two-star rank.

This week saw the White House send to the Senate the nomination of Maj. Gen. James E. Moore, USA, for temporary three-star rank. He is expected to command the corps in Korea. At present, General Moore is on duty on Okinawa.

One reason that a new list of general officer "makes" seems likely is the fact that a brigadier general, William J. Thompson, USA, has been assigned as Chief of the Artillery Branch of the Career Management Division.

The Infantry Branch of CMD also has a new chief, Col. Ben Harrell, USA. He reported last month.

The Armor Branch will get a new Chief in March, when Col. George R. Mather, USA, reports to the Pentagon.

It seems unlikely, in the view of experienced Pentagon observers, that the Artillery Branch alone will have a brigadier general as its chief.

Chemical Corps Changes

Maj. Gen. William M. Creasy, USA, Chief Chemical Officer, has announced establishment of a new Career Management Division in the Chemical Corps under Col. Frank M. Arthur, USA. A special civilian committee had recommended such a step as part of a comprehensive program to strengthen the Corps.

General Creasy also designated Mr. Edgar A. Crumb, a lieutenant colonel in the Army Reserve and a WWII Marine Corps officer to the newly created post of Executive Director.

Colonel Crumb has been connected with the Chemical Corps research and development program since 1939.

Soldiers' Home Stirs Two-Service Interest

The Air Force is making a new bid for a bigger say in the management of the U. S. Soldiers' Home in Washington, D. C.

The top post of Governor is held by a retired Army general, at present General Wade H. Haislip, USA-Ret., a former Vice Chief of Staff.

The Air Force is pointing out to Defense Department officials that airmen make the same contribution to the Home as soldiers—10 cents per month.

At present, the Army has legal responsibility for managing the Home, with the Air Force permitting non-voting representatives on the Board.

Public Information Report

The Army has issued new regulations (AR 360-45) prescribing procedures for informing the Pentagon of public information activities conducted in the United States. Reports will be prepared by all Class I, II, and III installations and by Army Antiaircraft Command units on site, including battalions.

Service Club Contest

The first Army-wide "Operation Army Service Club" contest, sponsored by The Adjutant General, will be judged in Washington, D. C., from 1-15 Sept., according to Circular 28-23.

Entries will be submitted in scrapbook form measuring not more than 12x15 inches.

Next Week—

How is the Air Force going about the critical job of solving problems relating to the guidance and control of "new fantastic weapons"?

What is being done in the field of detecting and countering enemy weapons?

Few military men know more about the answers to these questions than Maj. Gen. Raymond C. Maude, USAF, Commander of the Air Force Cambridge Research Center at Laurence G. Hanscom Field, Bedford, Mass.

Next week's issue of The Journal will carry a special report by General Maude on this vital facility.

is considerable inequity in the amount of medical care provided" for the almost three million dependents of the Armed Forces.

He said "It has been established that some military medical care is provided for only about sixty per cent of them."

Secretary Wilson expressed his belief that Servicemen "cannot be expected to do their best jobs in training or in combat if they are worried about the health of their dependents."

The same viewpoint was hammered home by Pentagon manpower chief, Assistant Secretary Carter L. Burgess. He told the Subcommittee, "One of the most disturbing influences on the family man in our Armed Forces is the frequent inability to secure proper medical treatment for his wife and children when they need it. This is particularly true when the serviceman is overseas or otherwise separated from his family. Surveys reveal that the decisions of many men to leave the service and return to civil life are influenced by the non-availability of medical care for their families."

Secretary Burgess said "More than one-third of our military personnel are overseas or serving on ships at sea. Others with their families are located in remote sections of this country, without access to military medical facilities. And where they are concentrated in areas of large military population, the medical facilities are greatly over-taxed and unable to give adequate care to dependents." He said it is essential to remove these inequities and offer military families "more of the benefits that have become standard in our way of life."

Pentagon studies show that a "remarkable expansion of health and insurance benefits" has taken place in private industry, with four times as many workers now covered by some type of health benefits as were covered before WWII. More than 70 per cent of these workers also are offered health insurance for their dependents and the employer pays the full cost of dependent coverage for 38 per cent of the workers.

Chairman Kilday said such statistics point up the fact that "We are not trying to give the military things others don't have. We are just trying to catch up."

Under the proposed medical care legislation, military families who are unable to obtain medical care from military hospitals and dispensaries could receive these services from civilian physicians and hospitals through a health insurance plan.

Dependents of Servicemen who died on active duty and dependents of military personnel retired for disability or length of service would continue to receive treatment at military facilities.

Participation in the insurance plan would be confined to active duty personnel and would be voluntary on the part of the Serviceman. As the bill is presently drafted, military personnel would share in the cost of the insurance, but the Government would bear the larger portion of the expense.

In overseas areas where no military medical facilities are available, and where medical care is not available under and insurance plan, the local commander would be authorized to contract for necessary medical services from civilian sources.

The need to also continue medical care for military families at military hospitals and dispensaries was highlighted by Dr. Frank B. Berry, Assistant Secretary of Defense for health and medicine. He said such provision "is essential to the professional progress and proficiency of our military medical services."

This aspect of the overall problem of medical care was spelled out further by VAdm. James L. Holloway, jr., Deputy Chief of Naval Personnel. He said "the care of dependents is an important factor in maintaining the professional skill and versatility of our medical officers. If they were restricted in their practice to the care of relatively healthy servicemen, their medical capabilities would be narrowed and reduced."

Admiral Holloway told the Subcommittee that the Navy Medical Corps has produced "many truly outstanding and exceptionally able doctors—some of whom have been, and are today, among the very finest in the medical profession. This would hardly have been possible without their having benefited through the broad medical experience provided by dependent care."

He said "The other side of this picture is that if the care of dependents were to be removed entirely from our medical facilities, then few, if any, competent doctors would be at all interested in medical careers in the Navy."

Care of dependents also "makes for more efficient utilization of our doctors and medical facilities that would otherwise be on a standby for emergency."

Efforts to solve the current dependent medical care problem have produced one concept which Admiral Holloway said he views as both "fallacious and dangerous." This concept holds dependent care as an unnecessary and unwarranted burden which could be transferred to civilian facilities, thereby reducing present requirements for military doctors and facilities.

"To adopt any such short-sighted, perilous concept would wreck our regular Medical Corps and reduce our entire military medical structure to a point of grave inadequacy," Admiral Holloway declared.

RAdm. W. W. Kenner, USCG, Chief of Coast Guard personnel, said families of Coastguardsmen "in all areas will receive improved medical care" under the proposal. The bill authorizes Coast Guard dependents to be cared for outside the continental limits of the United States in Department of Defense hospitals. At present, such treatment costs individual USCG members $17 per day.

The Subcommittee counsel, Lt. Col. John R. Blandford, USMCR, explored the question of giving the Coast Guard the same benefits which are made available to the Armed Forces under the terms of the bill. Chairman Kilday said the Subcommittee will discuss this possibility in more detail at the hearings progress.

Representatives of the American Medical Association, the American Dental Association and the American Hospital Association also testified on the measure.

The AMA noted that the proposal makes it mandatory that military medical care be provided for dependents, within specified limits, and that the insurance plan is "only" authorized on an optional basis.

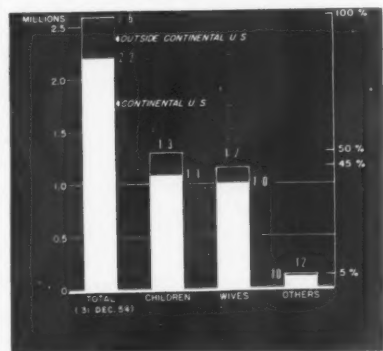

"We feel," an AMA spokesman said, "that this emphasis should be reversed or, at the least, that the emphasis on military care should be removed. We feel that it is unwise to weight the bill in favor of military rather than civilian care."

The AMA also suggested that mandatory charges should be established for out-patient treatment at military medical facilities, and that the Serviceman not be required to pay any part of the cost of the insurance program for treatment in civilian facilities.

If medical care is to be provided by the

Eliminate Sea Duty Promotion Rule; Navy Secretary Wins Broader Powers

Sea duty qualifications are abolished for Naval officers by legislation sent to the House floor this week by the Armed Services Committee.

The plan also gives the Secretary of the Navy broader powers in the field of officer promotions.

Present laws which prescribe the procedures to be followed by Naval examining boards, their reports and the approval of such reports are repealed by the new proposal (HR 4704).

The decision to do away with sea duty qualifications, Secretary of the Navy Charles S. Thomas had told the Committee, is based on the fact that "many officers are assigned to duties exclusively in some particular specialty and have no opportunity to become qualified to perform all duties at sea because of the increasing specialization of duties in the Navy."

He said the requirement that an officer must be qualified to perform all the duties at sea of the grade to which he is to be promoted "has become difficult to comply with."

The measure gives the Navy Secretary authority to tell examining boards what professional qualifications they must look for in officers up for promotion. At present, examining boards set their own criteria.

Also, under current laws, no Navy officer is promoted to a higher grade on the active list of the Navy until his mental, moral and professional fitness to perform all of his duties at sea has been established to the satisfaction of a board of examining officers appointed by the President. The same applies to the Marine Corps.

When examining boards were first established, Secretary Thomas informed the Committee, officers of the Navy and Marine Corps were promoted to the next higher grade by seniority. The examination conducted by the Naval Examining Board was the only means of determining the officer's qualification for promotion.

Under selection processes set up under the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, officers in grades above that of ensign in the Navy and second lieutenant in the Marine Corps are now selected for promotion to the next higher grade after a selection board review of their entire record from time of initial entry into the Service, and after comparison of their records with all other officers of the same grade under consideration by the selection board.

Officers selected for promotion under the present system also must be examined by a Naval Examining Board to determine their mental, moral and professional qualifications to perform sea duty. Mr. Thomas said this "results in some duplication of functions of a selection board," and, besides, many officers have no opportunity to qualify for all sea duties.

As reported, the proposal retains the statutory nature of examining boards but takes away their right to establish criteria for qualification of an officer for promotion and places this authority in the hands of the Secretary. Mr. Thomas said this will afford "more flexibility of administration."

Under the new bill, no Naval officer in the rank of Lt. (jg) through Commander will be promoted to the next higher grade on the active list until he demonstrates to the satisfaction of an examining board such professional qualifications "as the Secretary of the Navy may prescribe."

No Ensign will be promoted permanently to Lt. (jg) on the active list until he demonstrates to the satisfaction of an examining board such mental, moral and professional qualifications as the Secretary prescribes.

The measure also calls for the Secretary to issue regulations governing the new procedures to be followed by examining boards "which will assure a full and fair hearing to officers whose cases are before an examining board."

Pentagon Wants Congress O.K. To Double Housing Effort O'Seas; $250 Mil. New Goal

The Defense Department has asked Congress to raise from $100 million to $250 million the ceiling on use of money from sale of surplus farm commodities overseas for construction of military family housing.

It's estimated that there is a requirement for 65,000 additional units in Europe and the Pacific.

Already authorized are 15,000 units to be built in England, largely for Air Force families, at a cost of $15 million. Upcoming are $17 million for Japan, $8 million for Spain and $3.5 million for Italy.

Also planned is a new increment for the United Kingdom.

Assistant Defense Secretary Franklin

G. Floete has reported that the Services have arranged for construction, either completed already or under way, of 4700 units in France, 700 in Morocco (with another 600 planned), and 500 in Newfoundland.

Another 3000 units is being negotiated for construction in France at a cost of about $45 million.

Mr. Floete said that the housing requirement in the U. S. last year was about 195,000 units. So far, this has been cut by approval of 37,000 Capehart units, built with private capital. It's expected that this program will account for about 100,000 units.

Ft. Bliss Seeks Items For AA & CA Museum

The Fort Bliss Replica Museum is seeking items for its Antiaircraft and Sea Coast Artillery collection.

To round out its exhibits in this field, the museum is trying to obtain such items as training aid and working models of guns, mortars, barrette guns, fire control equipment, regimental colors: in brief, anything that depicts the history of the Antiaircraft and Sea Coast Artillery.

Anyone with information pertaining to the acquisition of these items by the Replica Museum should contact Lt. Col. T. N. Chavis, USA, Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations, Fort Bliss, Tex.

Maj. Fergusson Wins $450 For Article

An article by Maj. Charles M. Fergusson, USA, on "Military Forces and National Objectives" has won the 1955 annual award of the Army's Command and General Staff College monthly publication, "The Military Review."

Major Fergusson's article won $100 for the best entry in the October 1955 issue and topped the leading stories in the other 11 issues to win the grand prize of an additional $350.

The article discussed the combination of diplomacy and military in the attainment of national objectives. The author is a 1942 graduate of West Point and a graduate of the 1955 regular class at the CGSC.

Army Generals Move

COL. JOSEPH F. RYNESKA, USA, left, receives from Col. Edson D. Raff, USA, the Gold Master Parachutist Wings marking 100 parachute jumps. Col. Ryneska commands the 187th Airborne RCT which will soon go from Ft. Bragg, N. C., to Ft. Campbell, Ky., to form the reactivated 101st Airborne Division. Colonel Raff is vice president of the Airborne Association.

Wear Uniform For Travel Fare, Army Emphasizes

The Army in an emphatic reminder in Circular No. 55-12 reports that railroad and bus officials have experienced considerable difficulty as a result of military personnel traveling on reduced-fare tickets while dressed in civilian apparel.

The Circular states that "violations of the regulations and conditions governing the sale of reduced-fare tickets could result in discontinuance of these fares."

Tax-exempt round trip reduced fares for military personnel on official leave or pass have been continued until 31 Jan. 1957.

AUTONETICS engineers have made the earth stand still. This equatorial mount subtracts the earth's rotation, making it possible to detect the minutest angular errors of gyros.

Man has made a flying brain to think beyond the speed of sound

Some aircraft being built today are too fast for a man to fly alone. Some of them he can't navigate ...one inch off course for an instant can mean a mile off course in a minute. Some of them he can't fight with ...if he sees a target, by the time he presses a trigger, the target has been passed.

What is the answer? Automatic navigation, automatic flight control, automatic weapons control. Gyroscopes more accurate and dependable than any ever built before. Computers the size of a matchbox that do the work of a packing case full of normal electronic equipment. Control systems more complex and more rugged than anything ever needed before. Such is a part of the work—some of the most important of its kind being done in America today—that is going on at AUTONETICS, a division of North American Aviation, Inc.

We'll be glad to tell you what we can—within security restrictions—of the work being done here. If you have a legitimate professional interest in the subject, write AUTONETICS, Dept. J-1, 12214 Lakewood Blvd., Downey, Calif.

AMERICAN AIRLINES chooses Americas Leading Airline Aeroproducts Propellers for its new fleet of Allison-powered Lockheed Electras

The Lockheed Electra airliners, setting the pace for the era of jet-powered transports and now in production for American Airlines, will be equipped with the proved team of Aeroproducts Propellers and Allison turbine engines. Both are products of General Motors.

Just as the Allison Turbo-Prop engines were selected because they are the most advanced in the world today, American chose Aeroproducts Propellers after the most careful evaluation. The decision in favor of Aeroproducts was based on rugged blade construction combined with unique features of pitch control and dependability. Result of more than ten years' intensive development, the Aeroproducts turbine propeller made its first flight in December 1945, in the first Turbo-Prop airplane to fly in the United States.

Since then, this General Motors power package of Allison engines and Aeroproducts Propellers has accumulated thousands of hours of successful flight experience in the Allison Turbo-Liner, the Air Force C-131C Transport and the Navy R3Y "Tradewind."

Now the advantages of Turbo-Prop power, demonstrated in this military experience, will be applied to commercial travel by air. The new four-engine Electras will cruise comfortably at more than 400 miles an hour—bringing speed and smoothness to short and medium-range flights. With the ability to take off and land on existing runways, these new Turbo-Prop transports will operate into any airport now regularly served.

Consider 1100 Reserves For AF Warrant Slots

A Warrant Officer promotion board will be convened at the Air Force Reserve Records Center, Denver, Colorado, in March or April to consider for promotion about 1100 Reserve W.O.'s not on extended active duty who are serving as airmen.

Nearly all of the eligibles are now serving as master sergeants. Most of them currently hold the reserve grade of Warrant Officer, W-1.

96th Bomb Wing Reunion

SAC's 96th Bombardment Wing, Altus AFB, Okla., is planning to host a reunion of the wartime members of its illustrious World War II namesake, the 96th Bombardment Group.

Behind the planned reunion are Col. Audrin R. Walker, USAF, present 96th Wing Commander, and Maj. Gen. Archie J. Old, USAF, Fifteenth Air Force commander, who commanded the 96th Bomb Group during WW II in Europe.

The reunion, a three-day affair at a state park near Altus, is planned for some time this spring. All former 96th members wanting further details may write Colonel Walker at Altus.

Col. Bartella Assigned Dep. Dir. of Trans., Servs.

Col. John M. Bartella, USAF, chief of staff of Southern Air Materiel Area (Europe) until last December, has assumed new duties as Deputy Director of Transportation and Services at Air Materiel Command Headquarters, Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio. He has additional duties as chief of the Transportation Division.

He succeeds Col. Marion G. Ferguson, jr., USAF, who has been reassigned as chief of the Cataloging and Standardization Division, which has the responsibility within the Air Force for the cataloging and standardization program, involving 1,200,000 items, and for technical and procurement data distribution.

The former chief of that division, Col. Asher B. Robbins, jr., USAF, has been named chief of the Plans and Operations Office in the Directorate of Supply.

Property Disposal Unit Moved From AMC to ATC

The USAF Property Disposal School at Hill AFB, Utah, will be transferred from the Air Materiel Command to the Air Training Command.

The transfer, the announcement said, is indicative of the new emphasis placed on the disposal of surplus Air Force property, and is intended to broaden the scope of the school.

HOW THE REGULAR AIR FORCE GREW

The amazing growth of the Regular Air Force is pointed up in the Administration's approval for an ultimate ceiling of 69,425 USAF officers—more than three times the number who were on active duty in 1949.

At that time, the Air Force had about 20,000 officers and wanted Congress to provide for a ceiling of 35,000, which might be attained by 1960. Capitol Hill hearings disclosed, however, that an increase of 15,000 would be difficult by 1960; consequently, Congress decided to compromise with a 7500 increase, thus providing the present 27,500 limitation.

The Air Force for the past several years had been considering legislation to ask for the other 7500 Regulars, believing that the Budget Bureau would not approve a larger request. But with the decision of Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson to provide for a structure of about 50 per cent Regular officers, the Air Force won Pentagon and Presidential approval for a buildup to 49,986 by July 1958 and 55,540 by 1963.

Eight Men of 18th AF With Antarctica Force

Eight flyers of TAC's 18th Air Force are members of Task Force 43 in Antarctica, acting as an advance party for the airdrop of Pole Station at the South Pole, to be carried out by the global airlift air force in October of this year.

They are: Maj. Dooley I. Mallory; Capt. Arthur H. Grafe; 1st Lt. John E. Tomasch; 1st Lt. Ernest A. Schmid; Capt. James H. Cummings; Capt. Henry Partridge; T/Sgt Harold E. Willett; and A/2C Fay L. Young.

Major Mallory, a pilot and supply officer, and Captain Grafe, a pilot and operations planning officer, are from 18th Air Force headquarters. Lt. Tomasch, a pilot and maintenance officer, and Lt. Schmid, a navigator and maintenance officer, are from the 63d Troop Carrier Wing at Donaldson AFB, S. C. Captain Partridge, a pilot and maintenance officer, and Captain Cummings, a pilot and maintenance officer, are from the 463d Troop Carrier Wing at Ardmore AFB, Okla., and T/Sgt Willett and A/2C Young are airdrop specialists from the 1st Aerial Port Squadron of Donaldson AFB, S. C.

The six officers and two airmen flew to New Zealand in Navy aircraft last Fall, and travelled to Antarctica on the ships of Task Force 43. They are participating in all Navy air operations there, studying all phases of Antarctic flying, so that they can brief the 18th Air Force thoroughly on what problems its crews may expect to face this Fall.

The 18th Air Force officers will return to the United States when Task Force 43 pulls out this Spring, but the two airmen, both specialists in heavy airdrop, will remain with the Navy wintering-over party.

The article in THE JOURNAL of 14 Jan., reporting that only one Air Force officer is on duty with Deep Freeze was in error.

The 18th Air Force is now conducting heavy drop tests high in the Colorado Rockies with Douglas C-124 Globemasters.

ters, dropping heavy cargo to 12,000 foot terrain surrounded by 14,000 foot peaks in below-zero temperatures, under conditions similar to what may be found at the geographic South Pole.

First SAC Surprise Inspection at Briggs

The Strategic Air Command has inaugurated a new series of surprise command inspections to determine the combat effectiveness of SAC units.

The first "no notice" visits was made at Briggs AFB, Tex., by Brig. Gen. David Wade, SAC's inspector general, and his staff. The "unannounced combat effectiveness check-ups" will be in addition to the annual command inspections which are performed by numbered air force inspection teams.

During the surprise visits, all tactical and support units at the base selected are directed to perform their assigned tasks under simulated emergency conditions. After all ground preparations are made, the units will fly a mission which includes practice bombing, navigation, gunnery and other tactical requirements.

General Hewitt Promoted

The list of Air Force nominations sent to the Senate by President Eisenhower on 9 January included the name of Brig. Gen. Albert G. Hewitt, USAF, for permanent promotion to his present rank. THE JOURNAL regrets that as a result of a typographical error, General Hewitt's name was omitted from the list as it appeared in our 14 Jan. issue.

FlyTAF Personnel Deputy

Col. William M. Hendrix, USAF, Matheson AFB, Calif., executive officer, will be assigned as deputy chief of staff for personnel for Flying Training Air Force at Waco, Tex., on 1 Feb.

He will be in charge of personnel matters for all the Air Force's flying training bases.

Sec. Quarles & AFcoFS Speak At Jet Age Meet

Representatives of all elements of aviation will participate in an air traffic control forum at the Jet Age Conference of the Air Force Association in Washington 3-4 Feb.

Gill Robb Wilson, president of the Air Force Association, said that seven experts, representing military, commercial and private flying, will comprise a panel to report on the problems and requirements resulting from congested airspace.

The air traffic control forum, Mr. Wilson said, is scheduled for the afternoon of 4 Feb., closing day of the Conference. It will follow a luncheon address by Air Force Secretary Donald A. Quarles, who will discuss the new industrial mobilization program of the Air Force. General Nathan F. Twining, Air Force Chief of Staff, will be the luncheon speaker on the opening day of the Conference and will project future operational problems of the Air Force.

The Jet Age Conference, latest in a series sponsored by the airpower organization, will explore the impact of modern aviation on the American community and spotlight the barriers which threaten to handcuff the progress of both military and civilian aviation.

The seven who will represent all elements of aviation on the air traffic control forum, Mr. Wilson said, are:

Col. J. Francis Taylor, jr., director of the Air Navigation Development Board; James T. Pyle, special assistant for aviation to the Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air; Clarence N. Sayen, president of the Air Lines Pilots Association; Leighton Collings, editor of Air Facts; C. F. Timmerman, air navigation control director for the Air Transport Association; Col. L. S. Lightner, chief of the air traffic branch in the Air Force Directorate of Operations; and Crocker Snow, director of the Massachusetts Aeronautics Commission.

OCS Class At Lackland Has Record WAF Strength

A new Air Force OCS class with the largest proportion of female membership since coeducational classes commenced in January 1949 is in training at Lackland AFB, Tex.

Class 56-B, scheduled for graduation in June, includes 20 women. There are 135 men in the class.

A previous class which graduated in 1953 had a larger number of women, 29, but total class enrollment was 675.

The present upper class of the school, which will graduate into officer ranks in March, contains only three female members.

Of the new feminine contingent, 17 are former enlisted WAF and three won admission from civilian life because of high collegiate and hometown recommendations. Upon completion of the six months course they will be awarded Air Force second lieutenantcies and assignments as WAF officers.

TAC, SAC & AMC Show In Air Recon. Exhibit

Tactical Air Command has announced the participation of its Ninth Air Force in the production of Operation Open Skies, an aerial reconnaissance exhibit on display in the United Nations Building in New York City.

The exhibit illustrates the capability of Air Force reconnaissance for accomplishing large-area aerial photography as well as for photographing pin-point targets. Open Skies is sponsored by the Mutual Inspection for Peace Committee.

Other Air Force commands which participated in construction of the exhibit were the Strategic Air Command and the Air Materiel Command. Air Force reconnaissance units were utilized in producing the exhibit through agreement with the Department of Defense.

Family Care. The prospects for ultimate enactment of an over-all plan to provide wider medical and dental care for members of Service families now seem quite bright. This is particularly true in the House where Chairman Carl Vinson (D-Ga) of the Armed Services Committee has taken a deep personal interest in the legislation. Furthermore the chairman of the subcommittee handling the bill is Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex), whose deep understanding of Service problems has been a major factor in much forward looking legislation over recent years. With Mr. Kilday in charge of the bill and Mr. Vinson evidencing his concern by sitting in on all the subcommittee hearings, action is sure.

Unfortunately the Senate Committee has not been active in service legislation thus far this session. Perhaps by the time the measure has cleared the House, the Senate members will be ready to settle down and process this measure which is so important to the morale and efficiency of the Armed Forces.

Research and Security. A timely and grave warning has been given to Congress and the Nation that our future security may well depend upon the amount of effort and money we put into research today.

Dr. Jerome C. Hunsaker, chairman of the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, told the President and Congress that to maintain our present lead in airpower we must use vigor and skill in pressing fundamental and applied research. Immediately before us are the problems of nuclear-powered aircraft and the intercontinental ballistic missile. To come in second in the race for these achievements would be fatal.

At virtually the same time, Lt. Gen. Thomas S. Power, USAF, commander of the Air Force's Air Research and Development Command, was telling the National Security Industrial Association that, while we won World War II on quantitative superiority because of our enormous production capacity, we must now look to qualitative superiority for our security in the future. We cannot hope to match the combined resources in manpower and material of the Iron Curtain countries. We must depend on having better weapons, not more.

In the long run—and research pays off only on the long pull—research is cheaper as well as more effective. An excellent illustration of this principle is the development, by an NACA scientist, of the new aerodynamic concept known as the Area Rule. From the NACA wind tunnel at Langley Aeronautical Laboratory and from the careful experimentation and calculations of Scientist Richard T. Whitcomb, came the discovery that simply by pinching in the waist of an airplane's fuselage the sharp increase in drag heretofore associated with transonic flight could be sharply reduced. Already the use of this principle in actual flight has demonstrated gains in speed of more than 100 miles an hour by supersonic airplanes. A prototype of Convair's powerful delta wing F-102, for example, already had been built before the Area Rule was developed. A second model was constructed using the "pinched waist" design. The comparative results were astounding. Here, in fact, is something for nothing. No more power is added, no more materials—nothing but a simple change in outward configuration—and performance leaps forward in great bounds.

Furthermore, as reported on page 3 of this issue, the Area Rule is proving itself valuable at supersonic as well as transonic speeds.

Such are the results of research. The "break throughs" which are mentioned so prominently in the daily press, are not the result of happenstance, they are the result of patient trial and error by skilled scientists using the latest tools of research.

SATURDAY, 28 JANUARY 1956

They do not just happen, they are made to happen.

General Power mentioned pointedly that the results of research for defense are also felt in commerce. This is always true. Many of our advances that benefit all of our citizens in their daily life—from electronics to biology, from chemistry to medicine—came to civilian use years ahead of time because of the pressure of national defense research and development. What could be more significant than the splitting of the atom which is destined to affect all peaceful pursuits of the future.

General Power also expects industry to assume a larger share of research and development in the future. Even today industry is spending great sums in this field. But, except for a few very large firms, the bulk of research into fields primarily concerned with the National Defense must come from governmental agencies because it is not something that produces profits today.

While Dr. Hunsaker and General Power were talking specifically of the field of aeronautics, the same principle of the importance of research applies with equal force to all other fields of National Defense. The Army and all of its weapons and supply and maintenance activities and the Navy and its undersea and surface ships can keep to the forefront in fitness only through research.

The search for progress must be continual and intensive. We hope Congress remembers this when it considers the '57 and future appropriation bills.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—Lt. Gen. John K. Cannon, Commanding General of U. S. Air Forces in Europe, is quoted in dispatches from overseas this week as stating that if his command is to continue to perform effectively its share in making and maintaining the peace it is most essential that replacements be received promptly. The depleted organization, he said, has been able to perform its function only through the "yeoman work of the few experienced men left."

50 Years Ago—There is a disposition on the part of the military committees of the Senate and the House to inquire into the whole mileage system, to ascertain whether limitations cannot be placed on the amount of travel by the Army, especially in such cases as permitting officers to return from the Philippines by way of Europe.

90 Years Ago—In consequence of the muster-out of troops and the discharge of general officers lately serving in the different military divisions, departmental commanders are rapidly reducing the number of districts within their commands to the smallest number consistent with the interest of the service, or abolishing them altogether. Instead of "districts," military posts are being substituted.

Combined Headquarters

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Reference your article on "Combined Headquarters" which appears under Memo For JOURNAL Readers on 14 Jan.

It is believed that Ft. Bragg and Ft. Campbell, both in the Third Army Area, were among the first, if not the first, to attempt the noble experiment of a Combined Headquarters, however, they were not mentioned in your article.

Speaking from my personal experiences, both from the Division and Post side, I do not believe this type Headquarters is feasible.

First of all, the Commanding General of a tactical Division, and if the Senior General Officer on the Post, the Post Commander, is a busy individual with his Division, i.e., Gyroscoping, a tactical Division overseas.

Second, the personnel of a tactical Division are not stable; they come and go and the tours of officers are limited, whereas the Post personnel are in stabilized tours of three-four years.

Third, the Mission of a tactical Division and that of a Post are 180 degrees opposite.

Granted it has given the Tactical Division General Staff more prestige on their 66's and more control and power than previously exercised, but at the same time it takes them away from their primary missions with the tactical Division. It may or may not increase the efficiency of a Post, but it is doubtful that it has effected any savings in manpower spaces. It has, in many instances, according to Post personnel, created inefficiency, duplication, and more paper work.

It is believed further studies should be made before saddling a Division Commander and his staff with two jobs, whereas either is a full time endeavor.

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I wish to thank you sincerely for publishing the article on the Navy's policy concerning poliomyelitis in the 7 Jan. 1956 issue of the ARMY-NAVY-AIR FORCE JOURNAL.

Your consideration in giving our views such publicity will, in my opinion, do much to clarify the true intent of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery in relation to our efforts to assist dependents afflicted with poliomyelitis.

The Bureau of Medicine and Surgery stands ready to be of assistance to you and your staff at any time should the need arise for an official opinion relative to the health of the personnel of the United States Navy.

The Profession of Arms

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

To the soles of my feet I resent the special "Medical Officers Pay Hike"; for by its very implication, the executive and legislative branches of our government label the profession of arms a second-rate profession totally unworthy of paragonization. We are told medics are in short supply because of civil life earnings; may we reply that shortly "staff and command" men of arms will indeed be in shorter supply. This legislation is an insult of the first water. Has any "medic" ever been drafted as president, secretary of state, etc.? Why is big business so anxious to get our top "staff and command" men?

It was not always thus: When I was commissioned a second lieutenant, the profession of arms still lived in the aura of Plato: the most important strata of citizen (the protectors of the Republic) next to the actual governing body.

What are they trying to do to the morale of this prized "hard core" that has exhibited its efficiency by winning the two greatest wars in all history. Can a medic do more??? The citizenry had better listen to Ridgway's voice in the wilderness.

defense ON CAPITOL HILL

FAMILY MEDICAL CARE hearings got off to a fast start this week with Chairman Kilday setting daily sessions both morning and afternoon for his House Armed Services Subcommittee. Five top Pentagon officials were heard in the first two hours of the opening session.

PROBLEMS OF OUT-PATIENT CARE FOR MILITARY FAMILIES will get a thorough going-over before the hearings end. Chairman Kilday says his group "will have to look into the question of out-patient care to determine whether a portion of the present out-patient load can be absorbed through private facilities on an insurance basis."

A BUSY SCHEDULE lies ahead for the Kilday group. As soon as the medicare bill is passed on to the parent Committee, the Subcommittee will be faced with the doctor-dentist pay measure and the Regular officer augmentation bill, probably in that order. Sandwiched in between, they also will be taking the Reserve rehabilitation pay proposal to the House floor. The latter measure was reported out last session.

HOUSING SHORTAGES for military families in France will be probed when hearings open on the new Military Public Works Bill now before the House Armed Services Committee. Two members of the Committee, Representatives James P. S. Devereux (R-Md.) (see JOURNAL, 14 Jan) and Leon H. Gavin (R-Pa.) have brought the matter to the attention of the Committee Chairman.

"MORE THAN 60 PER CENT of our personnel with dependents in France are living in substandard accommodations," Congressman Gavin reported. He said he was "disturbed over the lack of a realistic housing program for our Army personnel in France," and he has urged "a thorough review" of the subject.

A PROPOSAL TO ELIMINATE BENEFITS for Servicemen who refuse to testify about Communist Party affiliation is being opposed by the Pentagon. Such legislation "would not assist the military services in ridding themselves of those who hide behind the Constitution when asked about Communist Party membership," the Defense Department says, because the rights and benefits which would be taken away by the bill are those which accrue to servicemen after separation.

RESERVE OFFICERS also failed to win the backing of the Pentagon on a bill to give them retired pay at the rate of seven per cent of their basic pay. Retired pay is "not a reward," the Pentagon says, and the present rates were established as a means of revitalizing the Service, nothing else. Those affected by the bill are Title III Reservists who served for at least seven years some part of which was performed during the periods 6 April 1917 to 1 Nov 1918 or 9 Sept 1940 to 30 Dec 1946; also Regular AF officers or Army or AF Reservists who served prior to 12 Nov. 1918.

THE EXPLOSIVE PROCUREMENT issue simmered down after the appearance of Army Assistant Secretary Frank Higgins before the House Armed Services Committee. A "good witness" (Hill parlance for a witness who is frank, succinct, well informed and to the point), Secretary Higgins won the confidence of the Committee and established an obviously more sympathetic approach to the buying problems of the Pentagon. It was his first appearance before the group.

ASKED TO BRIEF THE COMMITTEE on his background, Mr. Higgins modestly demurred at first but, under friendly pressure, eventually clipped off an autobiographical sketch which left little doubt about his ability to handle the Army's multi-billion dollar procurement program. As a result of the Secretary's expert testimony, other Defense witnesses found the hearings "easy sledding."

AS IT TURNED OUT, the Committee voted 16-0 to require the Services to do more open competitive bidding but added to, instead of reducing, the number of methods by which the military departments can negotiate contracts. Justification for future negotiated contracts, however, must be "clear and convincing."

FURTHER INVESTIGATIONS of military procurement are slated by the Senate Committee on Government Operations. The Committee's recent investigation of the Armed Services Textile and Apparel Procurement Agency uncovered evidence that "unscrupulous contractors had obviously bribed both civilian and military personnel" attached to the Agency. Chairman John McClellan (D-Ark.) said further investigation, which will embrace "other instances of waste, inefficiency, fraud and corruption" should serve to warn "others guilty of similar infractions that these practices will not be tolerated."

DESPITE CONTRARY Hoover Commission recommendations, the Senate has approved new legislation authorizing the Government to pay the cost of shipping autos of Service personnel to foreign duty stations either by MSTs or commercial vessel. Last April the Commission said if Service families want to take a car for their personal use on foreign assignment "the owner should pay for its transportation to and from his station overseas."

BUTTER WILL BE REPLACED BY OLEO on some Navy mess tables as the result of legislation favorably reported by the House Armed Services Committee. Under present law the Navy may only use butter, but says it can save a million dollars by changing the ration to one-third oleo, two-thirds butter.

STATESIDE SAILORS would get a chance to vote their preference. If a majority at any one base prefer oleo, oleo will take over at that base. Most of the margarine, however, would go to Navy facilities where there is not adequate refrigeration, such as general messes at advance bases, expeditionary force vessels on extended operations in foreign waters, and to men on field maneuvers.

BIGGEST SINGLE ITEM in the military construction bill is a request for $23.9 million to build new facilities and family housing at Andersen AFB, Guam. Another big chunk, $23.3 million, goes to the Naval Magazine at Port Chicago, Calif. More than $21 million each also is being asked for three Air Force Bases—Minot, Eglin and Mather.

MEMO For Journal Readers

THE WHITE HOUSE HAS ORDERED a new crackdown on discussion of guided missiles by Pentagon officials. It came on the heels of a Defense Department release late last week of photographs (page 35) showing a model of the Army's Red-stone. The impact of the White House instruction was evident in the fact that guided missiles went virtually unmentioned in a speech delivered 25 Jan. by Air Force Secretary Donald A. Quarles. IT WILL BE DIFFICULT however to maintain a blackout on guided missile progress. National interest in this weapon is reflected in current major articles appearing in prominent national news magazines. Furthermore, Congressional Committees are certain to probe for details in the guided missile field during forthcoming budget hearings. Beyond these considerations, there is considerable pride of achievement in the individual Services and industry, with the understandable desire to make public guided missile news which is not considered to be classified. WHETHER THE WHITE HOUSE ATTITUDE blocks release of a promised guided missile progress report by Secretary Wilson remains to be seen. Mr. Wilson had hoped to make this statement public at the end of 1955, but held it up to confer with the Service Secretaries and JCS Chairman, who then were making oversea inspections. It won't be surprising now if Secretary Wilson decides to postpone the guided missile statement.

THE PENTAGON WILL URGE approval by Congress of a $300,000 request for construction of five sets of quarters for the JCS Chairman and his staff. It's pointed out that the present quarters occupied by the Nation's top ranking military officer are so small that he finds it necessary to use private clubs for official entertainment. President Eisenhower is known to feel that the lack of an adequate home for the JCS Chairman is not consistent with the prestige of the office. Chances are seen good that Congress will vote the request, though possibly restricting the authorization only to the Chairman's home and not to quarters for a staff.

SOME LINE OFFICERS are not enthusiastic over the decision to accelerate promotions of Medical and Dental officers. They agree that action needs to be taken to provide higher pay in order to assure top caliber care for military men and their families. But there is a considerable feeling that increased rank should not be the method for achieving the higher pay, since other privileges (housing for example) go with rank precedence. The speed-up of Medical and Dental promotions is not expected to have a serious effect on promotion of line officers, though there is a possibility of some delays.

FOR THE THIRD TIME, Capt. Arthur C. Smith, USN, head of the Value Engineering Section of BuShips, has been designated to replace Capt. Robert L. Moore, USN, for the last 3½ years supervisor of shipbuilding and naval inspector of ordnance at the Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics Corp. at Groton, Conn. In this post, Captain Moore, who becomes commander of the Portsmouth, N. H., Naval Shipyard replacing retiring Capt. Cornelius S. Seabring, USN, supervised construction of the world's first atomic submarine, the USS Nautilus and USS Seawolf. Mrs. Moore is the daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Guy E. Davis, USN-Ret., of Newport, R. I.

NEWLY ORGANIZED, the Ft. Rucker, Ala., chapter is expected to become the largest and most active unit of the American Helicopter Society. More than 200 attended the first meeting.

AN ART PROBLEM confronts the Army: what to do about 25 war paintings, with an estimated value of $3,525? These are WWII paintings by German artists of campaigns in Africa, Crete and Italy in which New Zealand troops participated. The Army Secretary, among his vast powers, has authority to sell the paintings to New Zealand, which wants them. But the United States doesn't want to sell the artworks; instead, it wants to give them to New Zealand. THAT ACTION will require special Congressional legislation.

FREE IN-FLIGHT MEALS for all military persons engaged in flight operations will be proposed to Congress by the Pentagon, contingent on Budget Bureau O.K. Flying personnel who receive a monetary subsistence allowance in lieu of ration now must pay for food consumed during operational missions or else provide their own meal. NOT COVERED by the proposed free-meal plan would be those persons flying for the sole purpose of fulfilling training requirements.

MORE NOTED FOR HIS BLACK CIGAR, Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, USAF, SAC C-in-C, had become the first "foreigner" to be awarded the honorary black belt from the Kodokan Judo Institute in Tokyo. With his backing, SAC has pushed a vigorous Judo training program for its combat crewmen.

WHO'LL GET QUARTERS 8 at Ft. McNair, Washington, D. C.? That's been an intriguing question among senior Army families since disclosure (The Journal 24 Dec.) that Gen. J. Lawton Collins, USA, U. S. Representative to the Military Committee and Standing Group of NATO, would retire. On the heels of President Eisenhower's nomination of the former Army CofS for four-star rank on the retired list, it can now be reported that the home occupied by Gen. and Mrs. Collins will be assigned to Gen. Williston D. Palmer, USA, Vice CofS, a bachelor. THE FAMED QUARTERS will be redesignated as the official residence of the Vice CofS, as had been intended when President Eisenhower, then CofS, asked Gen. Collins to move in. MANY ARMY WIVES have been wondering whether the Army would retain the Quarters—and if so, who would get them—or if Gen. Collins' expected successor, Lt. Gen. Leon W. Johnson, USAF, would be assigned this home while serving in the top NATO billet. Gen. Palmer already has been told to move in when the Collins family leaves.

MILITARY BUDGET PROBLEMS have been relaxed long enough to permit the Atomic Age Army to make a special purchase—12 hunter type horses. They will be used by the Pentathlon Squad preparing for the 1956 Olympics in Melbourne, Australia. The team will train at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex.

SECDEF WILSON WILL ASSURE Congress during budget testimony that the Defense Department is spending adequately for basic research. The Hoover Commission had charged that the $20 million annual outlay should be "significantly increased." Mr. Wilson has held to the view that research for which his Department pays should be confined to areas related to the defense mission. He says the National Science Foundation should support science for the general purpose of advancing knowledge and promoting education in scientific fields. A HOOVER COMMISSION PROPOSAL that the offices of the Assistant Defense Secretaries (Research and Development) and (Applications Engineering) be merged has been rejected by Secretary Wilson. He maintains that both offices should be preserved.

U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of The Treasury—George M. Humphrey
Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond

COAST Guard Search and Rescue officers and men saved the lives or rescued from immediate peril 1,744 persons during the first three months of fiscal year 1956—from 1 July to 30 Sept. 1955.

In all, S&R Coast Guardsmen rendered aid to 19,133 persons—both civilian and military—during the three-month period. More than $75.2 million in property was involved in the rescue operations, excluding the value of Coast Guard vessels, planes and auxiliary equipment.

While it is not possible to give comparative figures for a similar period in FY '55—this is the first report prepared under the Coast Guard's new operations statistics program in which the summaries previously done at unit and district offices are now done using electronic accounting machines at Headquarters—it is apparent from the constantly increasing number of persons who are taking up pleasure boating that S&R personnel are being called upon more and more frequently.

For the past several years, with their responsibilities growing, approximately the same number of officers and men are assigned to Search and Rescue units.

With the same number of personnel and facilities available for S&R missions, it is necessary for Coast Guardsmen to remain on duty for longer stretches of time. In the past, Headquarters has normally allowed the majority of S&R personnel one day off in three.

As the number of emergency calls began to rise, however, it became impossible to grant normal liberty rotation. A year ago, officers and men were allowed only 16 liberty hours every fourth day with a maximum of 40 hours every eighth day.

At certain times of the year, even this amount of liberty cannot be given. During the West Coast fishing season, for example, when there are more than 3,000 fishing vessels out at one time, none of the personnel at the Port Adams Station is granted any liberty for periods ranging up to five days.

The first machine tabulation shows that the 12 Coast Guard Districts responded to emergencies involving 5,521 vessels, 133 aircraft, 952 personnel (most military), and 340 miscellaneous cases. In performance of these duties the Districts and Headquarters units were called upon for aid on 6,676 different occasions.

The number of persons assisted by Coast Guardsmen total 19,133. Of this number, 16,515 were not in direct peril of their lives. Most of the 1,744 saved or rescued were picked up by helicopters.

At the same time, aid was given in 634 medical cases.

The tabulation shows that the Third District in New York provided assistance in the largest number of cases, 4,245. In rendering aid to these persons, the Third District performed 1,723 individual missions. The value of the property in danger in these cases was more than $12.7 million.

The First District in Boston saved the greatest amount of property—amounting to nearly $16 million—while responding to 785 calls for help. The First District assisted 3,679 individuals.

Here's a complete list of the number of persons saved, rescued or aided by each of the Districts: First (Boston)—315; Second (St. Louis)—27; Third (New York)—432; Fifth (Norfolk)—128; Seventh (Miami)—70; Eighth (New Orleans)—64; Ninth (Cleveland)—464; 11th (Long Beach)—nine; 12th (San Francisco)—69; 13th (Seattle)—138; 14th (Honolulu)—10; and 17th (Jeneau)—18.

SINGLE-PIECE
HOLLOW

BLADES

Curtiss-Wright Propellers are the only propellers in the aircraft industry with single-piece hollow steel blades. These blades are ruggedly designed to meet the toughest conditions of flight, and to deliver the maximum in efficiency, dependability and long life.

Extruded from a single solid billet of steel—not welded or brazed—Curtiss-Wright propeller blades have greater strength, better resistance to impact damage, withstand higher stress levels. Steel construction provides far greater abrasion and erosion resistance, adding years to propeller life.

17.7-Million Propeller Hours

Curtiss-Wright hollow steel propeller blades of monocoque design have been proved by 17.7-million propeller hours—as high as 16,000 hours on some individual blades. Accelerated life tests under toughest conditions have shown Curtiss-Wright Propellers, with hollow steel blades and single-piece forged steel hubs, a match for the most strenuous flight and ground operations, particularly where unimproved runways and maximum load and power conditions are involved.

Featuring positive electric pitch change for complete engine control, Curtiss-Wright propellers also have aerodynamic and structural reserves for the larger aircraft and greater engine powers that lie ahead.

ENGINEERS • TECHNICIANS • SCIENTISTS

Curtiss-Wright has permanent career positions open for specialists in advanced engines and propellers, metallurgy, electronics, nucleonics, ultrasonics, plastics and chemistry. New 85-square-mile Research and Development Center at Quehanna, Pennsylvania and expanded divisional engineering programs are creating opportunities for more engineers, technicians and scientists in both aviation and diversified industrial projects.

Operations

Cherokee—on 9 Jan. took in tow the disabled SS Hellespont which reported it was out of fuel and had its lower half of rudder missing. On the next day, the Cherokee was relieved of its towing mission by the tug Cavalier. The Cherokee escorted the tug and the disabled vessel en route to Norfolk and discontinued the escort upon approaching the Virginia Capes.

Admiral Kenner Tells Coast Guard Need

Testifying before the House Armed Services Committee, RAdm. W. W. Kenner, USCG, Chief, Office of Personnel, asked Congress to make two amendments to the Family Medical Care Bill.

The Personnel Chief said that when the Coast Guard is operating as a service in the Navy, dependents of members of the Coast Guard on active duty should be authorized to receive medical care and to participate in medical insurance plans on the same basis as dependents of the other Armed Forces. He also asked for authority to contract with local medical sources for care of certain dependents of members of the Coast Guard outside the continental limits of the United States where no military medical facilities or insurance plans are available.

He pointed out that Army, Navy and Air Force personnel in Alaska, Hawaii and other overseas areas are cared for on a space-available basis in Defense Department hospitals. On the other hand, since the facilities of U. S. Public Health Service Hospitals are available to Coast Guard families, and since there are none of these hospitals outside of the continental United States, Coast Guardsmen are required to pay $17.50 to Defense Department Hospitals whenever members of their families are treated.

The enactment of such measures, Admiral Kenner said, "will improve morale in the Coast Guard, increase the potential staying power of the Servicemen, and increase the attractiveness of the Service as a career."

This roster of Lear aviation products is, of necessity, incomplete. Many of these products are frequently combined to form an infinite variety of additional products or systems. Only enough typical devices are shown here to demonstrate Lear's mastery of a field of science and technology that uses thousands of such building blocks for meeting the highly specialized requirements of modern aircraft and missiles.

Gyroscope Action

Three Army divisions will be moving from the United States to Europe and vice versa this year in Operation Gyroscope; the 71st Infantry Division, to be redesignated the 4th, will also change places with the 2d Infantry Division at Ft. Lewis, Wash., which goes to Alaska. Periodically, THE JOURNAL will publish round-up reports on Gyroscope progress.

THE FIRST CONTINGENT of the 11th Airborne Division has arrived in Germany from Ft. Campbell, Ky., to begin replacing the 5th Infantry Division in the Augsburg-Munich area. Brig. Gen. Richard H. Harrison, USA, Artillery Commander, led the first contingent. The 5th goes to Ft. Ord, Calif., with the 101st Airborne Division to be activated at Campbell under Maj. Gen. Thomas L. Sherburne, USA, now Assistant Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel.

THE 3D ARMORED DIVISION at Ft. Knox, Ky., has held its first division-wide exercise, a 24-hour practice alert, since its reorganization from a training unit last March, as part of a stepped-up readiness program preparatory to its departure for Seventh Army service in Germany.

THE 8TH INFANTRY DIVISION at Ft. Carson, Colo., under Maj. Gen. Thomas M. Watlington, USA, will send nine senior officers to Germany on 1 Feb. to complete plans for the Gyroscope switch next Fall. The 8th will replace the 9th Infantry Division, which has headquarters at Goepfingen. Col. Paul G. Guthrie, USA, CofS, and Col. Dexter K. Griffith, USA, head the Carson contingent to Germany. It's interesting to note that General and Mrs. Watlington have a son, 1st Lt. Thomas M. Watlington, III, USA, stationed with the 10th Infantry Division which Gyro'd to Europe last summer, and a daughter, Mrs. Stephen O. Edwards, USA, whose husband is an Army captain with the 3d Armored Division.

AN ADVANCE PARTY from the 254th Field Artillery Battalion in Germany arrives at Carson early in February, with the bulk of the unit slated to reach the Colorado post in April. Carson's 7th Field Artillery Battalion goes to Germany.

GERMAN TRAFFIC SIGNS are being put up alongside the regular markers at Carson to make it easier for military personnel and their families to qualify for driving privileges in Germany.

NEWLY ISSUED CIRCULAR 601-14 tells how active duty, prior service and non-prior service personnel may enlist or reenlist for Gyroscope service with the 8th Infantry Division. A drive will be conducted through 30 April to obtain non-prior service people for duty with the 8th.

Free Medi-Care Insurance

Government for military families, the AMA said it strongly urges "that increased emphasis be placed on the utilization of civilian facilities and the services of civilian physicians."

The American Dental Association urged that the medicare proposal amended to give commanders in overseas areas authority to contract with local dental sources for the dental health care of dependents in the same manner proposed for medical care.

Another amendment proposed by the ADA would permit the Pentagon to include within the basic insurance plan the dental services which are normally available to those who participate in health service plans such as Blue Cross and Blue Shield. Many of these plans, the ADA said, now defray the cost of oral surgical services performed by dentists in hospitals.

The American Hospital Association urged that the Government pay the entire cost of the military dependent health care program, that coverage under the insurance plan be made available to all military dependents, and that health benefits should be continued for the Serviceman and his dependents after the man steps out of uniform.

Army and Air Force personnel chiefs and the Surgeons General of all three Services were scheduled to testify on the medicare plan as THE JOURNAL went to press.

New Tax Credit

rate, on the amount of his retirement income up to $1200. The same section permits an individual to earn up to $900 a year as an employee or in self-employment without affecting the amount of the retirement credit. However, earnings in excess of $900, in the case of an individual under age 75 reduce, dollar for dollar, the $1200 maximum for retirement income. For those aged 75 and over there is no earned income limitation.

The new law amends section 37 to increase from $900 to $1200 the amount that an individual can earn without reducing the $1200 on which the retirement credit is computed. The age at which there will be no limitation upon the amount of earned income is reduced from 75 to 72. Both amendments apply only to taxable years beginning after 31 Dec. 1955.

Under the new law, earnings in excess of $1200, in the case of an individual under age 72, reduce, dollar for dollar, the $1200 maximum for retirement income.

In reporting the measure last year, the House Ways and Means Committee estimated that it will reduce tax revenues by about $11 million annually. Since then, retired personnel under 65 have been added to the group affected and the reduction will be even higher.

NATO Defense College Trains Officers of 13 Nations for Top Staff Positions

By LT. GEN. C. E. BYERS, USA
Commandant, The NATO Defense College

"Freedom is not something just to have, it must be won, over and over—again and again."

This familiar quotation typifies the spirit that exists throughout NATO today. Assuming greater and greater importance in exemplifying the building upon this spirit is the NATO Defense College.

Following a recommendation of the Supreme Allied Commander Europe, the North Atlantic Council on 15 June 1951 established a Defense College. General Eisenhower recognized the need for suitably-trained officers to be used in key positions on high level NATO staffs. These individuals, both on the military and civilian side, should have a thorough appreciation of the need for international cooperation and a good understanding of the problems, methods and achievements of the Alliance as a whole.

This institution therefore must be dedicated to an international education—an education which would impart the knowledge and understanding necessary to enable officers assigned to integrated commands to work together in the most efficient manner possible.

Thus on 19 Nov. 1951, an idea was born into reality with the opening of the NATO Defense College.

In the Ecole Militaire

Appropriately enough, the College is located in a wing of one of the most remarkable buildings in Paris, the Ecole Militaire, located at the south border of Champ de Mars in the very shadow of the Eiffel Tower. For 200 years this historic structure has been the center of the majority of French higher military learning. Now its historic walls are encompassing an additional college whose multi-national student body strives to work towards a new common goal—a mutual understanding and collaboration that may assist in diminishing prejudice born of national pride and thereby further the attainment of a military, political and economic solidarity that may face, on a continuing basis, the threat which communism will present to our alliance for the indefinite future.

As commanding officer of the College, the Commandant directs the operations with the specific objective to assist in the development of NATO Forces into a unified efficient force by training selected personnel in the following:

a. "Organization and aims of the North Atlantic Treaty and major factors involved in common defense.

b. Problems concerning the preparation and conduct of NATO forces for war.

c. Organization and working methods of NATO bodies and staffs.

d. Language comprehension of French or English according to the needs of the individual Faculty Officers and Members."

Under NATO Standing Group

The Commandant of the College is directly responsible to the NATO Standing Group in Washington, D. C. He is appointed every two years by the French, U. K. and U. S. Governments in that order, rotating by services. The first commandant was Admiral Lemonnier of France who was succeeded by Air Marshal Darvall of the United Kingdom. On 15 Nov. 1955, the command was assumed by the undersigned to be the first United States Commandant.

The Commandant is assisted by a faculty consisting of three military Deputies, one civilian Deputy, ten military Instructors and one civilian Instructor. The military Deputies have the rank of Brigadier General or equivalent. The Commandant, with his four Deputies, forms the Council of Studies. In addition to their basic military skill, the instructors are sought with particular qualifications in international politics, finance, and economics. The faculty is furnished principally by France, the United Kingdom and the United States, plus representatives from three other NATO nations. It is expected that all the nations in the alliance will provide an instructor in the rotating process.

13 Nations Send Students

The student body is drawn from the military and the civilian departments of the NATO nations on a quota basis established by the Standing Group. The civilian students are procured predominantly from the Foreign Offices. However, in recent classes a few of the students have been drawn from the Ministries of Finance, Defense and Civil Defense. At present, there are 54 students in the course, the maximum now possible in existing facilities. Thirteen of the fifteen NATO nations are represented. Although Iceland and Luxembourg are normally invited to provide students, they have not yet utilized their spaces. The Federal Republic of Germany has three well chosen representatives in the present course and is authorized four members in future classes. The opportunity to broaden the base of NATO understanding afforded by the attendance of these new members is welcomed by all.

As is the case throughout NATO, the two official languages of the College are English and French. A student should be basically fluent in one of the two. Lectures are conducted in either of the two languages at the discretion of the speaker. A team of well-qualified interpreters is employed so that, by merely using earphones and a selective dial, simultaneous translation is easily available to the students during all lectures. In addition, each member of the class, faculty and staff takes language instruction every morning the members are in Paris. The individual takes instruction in the language with which he is least familiar. This language instruction by class provides an easy atmosphere in which to learn a new language and develops a spirit of camaraderie that extends into other aspects of life at the College to the benefit of all.

The 54 students at the College are divided into nine committees, with an instructor assigned to each committee. The composition of the committee is frequently modified during the course in order that every student will have an opportunity to work with as many different colleagues as possible.

Top Level Lecturers

Lectures are given normally every morning by prominent personalities or highly skilled experts in the fields of command, strategy, politics, government, economy, and the social sciences. Some typical lectures have included: "Defense of Europe" by Field Marshal the Viscount Montgomery of Alamein, UK; "Military Position of NATO" by General Alfred M. Gruenther, U. S.; "European Unity" by Monsieur Spaak, Belgium; "The Place of NATO on Global Strategy" by Brig. General Beukema, U. S.; "European Unity" by Monsieur Robert Schuman, Fr. At the completion of each lecture, after a brief coffee break, the speaker takes the stand to defend himself through a question period that is often even more profitable than the formal presentation. The speakers enjoy this opportunity to exchange ideas with the members and invariably comment on the stimulating experience these periods afford. Every possible effort is made to enhance intellectual curiosity.

The afternoons are occupied with committee work on assigned problems. Problems are selected for appropriateness with respect to the segment of the course and for timeliness in the light of world events. During the course, four such problems are presented for committee study. Coordination with the NATO Secretariat and SHAPE Military Representatives is continually available to all members of the class.

Discussion Groups are held periodically during the course. Groups of students under the chairmanship of the instructor debate the important problems now confronting the North Atlantic Alliance.

Tour NATO Countries

Last, but not least in importance, the course includes a number of instructional tours to most of the NATO countries in Europe. Each class visits national capitals, selected industrial plants and major NATO Headquarters. They are privileged to receive briefings by the Foreign Ministers, Ministers of Defense, National Chiefs of Staff and leading industrialists. The students study the problems of most of the European countries on the spot under the best possible conditions. Free time is arranged so the members of the class who are from the host nation may show their classmates some of the national assets about which they have been talking during their months of association. The understanding that develops as the result of these exchanges constitutes one of the most fundamental and lasting benefits derived from attendance at the College.

The members of the Class at the NATO Defense College are individuals of approximately 15 years service who have been chosen by their nations as outstanding representatives. Therefore, as in the case of most national war colleges, pure instruction as such has little place in the curriculum. The opportunity for mature men with such varied experience to exchange ideas and discuss their personal reaction to the lectures which have been presented by distinguished speakers permit a class to generate an academic atmosphere which is unique in the field of education. The Commandant, the Deputies and all members of the Faculty coordinate subjects, secure lecturers, and use every bit of imagination possible in the preparation of an atmosphere which is thought-provoking. The members of the class do the rest.

On 3 Feb. 1956, the 8th Course will come to a close and 54 more graduates will depart from the College prepared to move forward into their expected key roles in NATO. The total number of graduates at the completion of the 8th Course will be 419. Of all the benefits derived from the members' brief six months at the College, the graduate feels that the words "Friendship" and "Understanding" can well summarize the value of the College to himself and to NATO. A friendship for fourteen other member nations, and an understanding of the problems confronting each nation furnish a starting point for the foundation of a durable strength on which the security of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization may rest secure.

College Students Get Word On Exchange Service

A year-end study of the College and University Contact Program of the Army and Air Force Exchange Service reveals that over 2000 retailing and business students have been briefed on the exchange operation, it is reported by Maj Gen. H. L. Peckham, USA, Chief of the Exchange Service.

Handling this assignment for the Exchange Service is Brig. Gen. Edward B. Gallant, USAF, Deputy Chief, A&AFES.

A graduate of Holy Cross, Boston College, and the Harvard Business School Advanced Management Program, General Gallant has visited a dozen colleges and universities taking the exchange story to the campus.

House Report Asks Pentagon To Consider Early Discharges For Enlisted Personnel

The Defense Department will be asked to give consideration to early discharges for enlisted men in a report being prepared for release by a House Armed Services Subcommittee.

"In the next few months," the report states, "it is believed that the military services who are accepting enlistments for a two-year period or taking inductees should give full consideration to the use of the early release program" contained in the Reserve Forces Act of 1955.

The act provides authority for the Services to release men who have completed 12 months' service and who agree to take Reserve training for a period which, when added to their active duty time, will total four years.

Defense officials have said that implementation of this provision of the Reserve Act would be too costly and would reduce the "readiness" factor in the active forces because most men are of little value to the Services during their first year in uniform.

Criticism of the Coast Guard also is contained in the report.

The Subcommittee said it was surprised to learn that the Coast Guard had not implemented the Reserve Act and has "no plans to do so until fiscal '57." This is at variance with plans outlined before the Committee during hearings last year.

The Subcommittee said the 6-month training program for Reservists got off to a slow start but is gaining impetus and that it is probably too early to tell how effective it will be. The group plans to take another tentative look at the Reserve program in about two months and a full-scale appraisal shortly after the beginning of the new fiscal year on 1 July.

VA Benefits Not Subject To Federal Taxation

Payments accruing from Veterans Administration benefits are not subject to taxation and do not have to be reported on Federal income tax returns. The same applies to dividends and proceeds from GI insurance policies.

Included among the tax-free VA payments are: Education and training allowances for veterans of the Korean conflict period who are in school or training establishments under the Korea GI Bill; Subsistence allowances paid to WW II veterans training under the original GI Bill; Subsistence payments made to disabled WW II and Korean conflict veterans training under Public Law 16, the Vocational Rehabilitation Act; Disability compensation and pension received by veterans for service-connected and non-service-connected disabilities;

Grants to seriously disabled veterans for homes designed for "wheelchair living"; Grants for motor vehicles to veterans who lost their sight or lost the use of their limbs; WW I emergency officers' retirement pay.

VA death benefits to families of deceased veterans also are exempt from taxation. They include death compensation and pension, indemnity and all GI insurance payments.

House OKs Academy Credit For 2,700

Approximately 2700 active and retired Service personnel who were cadets or midshipmen at the Naval and Military Academies during the Spanish American War or WW I benefit from legislation passed by the House.

The measure, HR 5055, which now goes to the Senate, provides that, for the purposes of laws administered by the Veterans' Administration, service as a cadet at West Point or as a midshipman at Annapolis during the period from 21 April 1898 to 5 July 1902, shall be considered active military or naval service in the Spanish-American War. Such service, or service as a cadet at the USCG Academy during the period from 6 April 1917 to 12 Nov. 1918 shall be considered active military or naval service in WW I.

Similar measures were approved by the House during the 81st Congress and 82d Congress, but were not considered favorably by the Senate.

These Questions And Answers Tell How Family Medical Care Plan Will Work

Q—Who is eligible for dependent medical care under the terms of HR 7994?

A—Those who are eligible include: (1) the lawful wife of the Serviceman; (2) children, under 21, unmarried, including adopted or step children; (3) parents and parents-in-law, if in fact dependent for over half of their support; (4) widows and dependent children of deceased members of the Armed Forces.

Q—What medical benefits are available under the plan?

A—Treatment includes diagnosis, care for acute medical and surgical conditions, care for contagious diseases, immunizations, maternity and infant care and certain limited dental care. Treatment of contagious diseases will be a new benefit for Naval families. Curtailment of dental treatment to emergency cases or treatment in remote or overseas locations will place new limits on Army and AF families.

Q—What types of medical are not provided for by the plan?

A—The following are not authorized: (1) care for chronic diseases and domiciliary cases; (2) care for nervous and mental disorders; (3) elective medical and surgical treatments; (4) prosthetic devices, hearing aids, orthopedic footwear or spectacles (with certain exceptions); (5) non-emergency ambulance service, and (6) routine home calls.

Q—Who is eligible to participate in the insurance plan?

A—Personnel on extended active duty only.

Q—Is participation in the insurance plan voluntary?

A—Yes. Generally, however, personnel who participate will be required to do so for a minimum of 12 months.

Q—Are all members of a Serviceman's family included in the insurance plan?

A—Yes, under two separate options. The first option includes only wives and children, with the Serviceman paying approximately 30 per cent of the monthly premium cost. The second option includes one plan for parents and parents-in-law and another for catastrophe insurance, with the Serviceman paying the total cost of the monthly premium.

Q—What type of coverage is provided under the insurance plan?

A—The coverage is approximately the same as that currently provided in military facilities, with a minimum of four months hospitalization.

Q—Will Service families be required to seek medical care only in civilian facilities?

A—No. Care can be obtained at either military or civilian facilities.

Q—What advantages does the proposed law provide over and above present medical care in the Armed Forces?

A—It creates uniform procedures for dependent medical care among all the Services, crystallizes into law the present traditional medical care benefits, improves the availability of dependent medical care to every Serviceman and increases career attractiveness.

Q—What will the insurance program cost?

A—For wives and children only, the plan will cost between $15 and $16 per month, with the Serviceman paying between $4.50 and $4.80 and the Government paying the balance. For a parent, the plan will cost the Serviceman between $18 and $19 monthly.

Extent Of Research May Determine U. S. Security, NACA Chief Tells Congress

Calling particular attention to the imminent problems connected with atomic-powered aircraft and intercontinental missiles, the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics warned the Nation this week that the future security of the United States may well depend upon the extent of our effort in fundamental and applied research.

Dr. Jerome C. Hunsaker, NACA Chairman, in submitting the 41st annual report, told President Eisenhower that "our national security may well depend on the intensity and competence of our research" to solve these critical problems.

"There is evidence," Dr. Hunsaker reported, "to indicate that our present position of leadership in the air has been challenged by a potential enemy. To maintain, at manageable cost, the necessary air power of requisite quality demands continuous research to anticipate the requirements of tomorrow's weapons."

In his letter to Congress, Dr. Hunsaker pointed out that "we should also keep in mind that with each advance in speed, problems requiring scientific investigation multiply, become more complex and difficult, and their study and solution more costly. The potential advantages to the cause of world peace if America first solves these problems are obvious."

Dr. Hunsaker emphasized that the range of a nuclear powered airplane would be limited only by the endurance of its human crew, while the missile traveling 10,000-15,000 miles an hour would be nearly impossible for an enemy to intercept.

As an example of the success of the NACA research team effort he cited the area rule discovery of 1952, which was kept secret for security reasons until last September. This concept, which can increase the speed of transonic airplanes as much as 25 per cent, resulted from a research program begun in 1951 in the new transonic wind tunnels, Congress appropriated funds in 1946 for the tunnels, the world's first successful wind

EVERYTHING from "who-dunits" to candle warmers, from a pottery deer to a wooden wall-dispenser for cigarettes turned up at the White Elephant sale of the Marine Officers' Wives' Club 18 Jan., at the Army Navy Country Club.

There were bargains by the score and members and guests lost no time in snapping them up. Even the table decorations were sold, disappearing almost before the luncheon ended.

Cunning "white elephants" with marshmallow faces, floppy felt ears, pipe cleaner trunks and bodies and pink and gold metallic skirts twined themselves around tall pink candles to form the table decorations. Centering the head table was a lovely, low arrangement of pink gladioli and white mums. Head table place cards were pen and ink sketches of little white elephants with sparkly pink collars.

The guests of honor, Mrs. Randolph McC. Pate, wife of the new Commandant of the Marine Corps, and Mrs. Vernon E. Megee, wife of the new assistant Commandant, were introduced by Mrs. Francis M. McAllister, Club president.

Mrs. McAllister also introduced two newcomers to the Club, Mrs. John Richards and Mrs. R. A. Pigot, wives of Royal Marine Officers from England who are stationed in the area, and Mrs. George Roll, new membership chairman who replaces Mrs. John C. Munn.

Mrs. E. W. Snedeker was chairman of the hostess committee. Her assistants were Mrs. R. B. Wilde, Mrs. DeWolf Schatzel and Mrs. E. Hunter Hurst, wives of officers in the G-3 (Plans, Operations and Training) Division, Marine Corps Headquarters.

March was the big month for babies in the hospital—206 were born—and April created the other end of the record with only 153 babies for the lowest monthly count.

All-time peak year for new citizens in this large Army hospital was 1953, when 2,532 new citizens entered Brooke's nursery. The number dropped to 2,352 in 1954.

SAC Family Aid Has 4500 Volunteers

There are now 57 Dependent Assistance Centers throughout SAC manned by over 4,500 active volunteer workers, reports Lt. Col. Don M. Kupfer, USAF, chief of SAC's personnel services branch.

Since the beginning of the program in April 1954, 15,500 Air Force wives have been graduated from the 200 orientation and training courses conducted by DA workers. Thousands of these have taken additional training necessary for one of the eight special committee jobs.

The DA program has now given assistance in about 16,000 major cases. This does not include minor cases or instances where volunteer workers referred cases to another agency.

The dependents assistance program was established on a command-wide basis to enable SAC's combat men to leave on any mission at a moment's notice with the knowledge that their families would be well taken care of during their absence.

ANDERSEN AFB, Guam—Mrs. Pearl L. Beard, Coordinator for the local Dependent's Assistance Program, has turned over the reins of the job to Mrs. William M. Buford. Mrs. Beard has served as coordinator for all Dependent's Assistance projects at Andersen for the past seven months and has contributed approximately 350 hours of her time to make the program a success. Medical Care Would Continue For Families Of Retired Members Under New Proposal

Dependents of retired military personnel and military personnel who died on active duty would continue to receive medical care at military facilities under the terms of the new Dependent Medical Care Bill.

The Pentagon said as a consequence of tradition and existing policy, medical care will continue to be provided through service medical facilities for:

1—Unmarried widows and unmarried children under 21 years of age of personnel whose death occurs on active duty or in a retired status.

2—Dependents of personnel retired for physical disability or length of service, other than personnel retired under Public Law 810, Title III (point system Reservists). However, Naval and Marine Corps Reservists who retire under PL 810, Title III, and who retain their Reserve affiliation also retain their eligibility for dependent medical care.

Under the terms of the new plan, only active duty personnel are eligible to take out medical insurance on their families.

Dependents of Reservists and National Guardsmen on extended active duty (that is, duty in excess of 90 days) are also eligible for treatment at medical facilities.

RETIRED SERVICE NOTES

Services Want Ret. Medical Officers

The Services have called upon the Defense Department to endorse a plan which would permit scores of retired military physicians and dentists to be used by the Government as civilians.

The plan would exempt any retired Regular military medical or dental officer from "dual compensation" restrictions.

The Defense Department has been conducting an intensive study into the problem of obtaining more civilian physicians and dentists for duties with the Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps.

The suggestion has been made that many retired medical and dental officers would be encouraged to fill such civilian billets if they were not handicapped by "dual compensation" restrictions.

Congressional Record Cites Dual Pay Plea

A JOURNAL editorial calling for repeal of dual compensation laws which prevent retired military officers from taking jobs with the Federal Government has been called to the attention of the Congress.

Representative Bob Wilson (R-Calif.), member of the House Armed Services Committee, inserted the editorial, "Now Retired Officers Are Sought," in the Congressional Record.

THE JOURNAL noted in the editorial that "hundreds of qualified officers are kept from Federal jobs they could fill efficiently and honorably," and urged that restrictive dual compensation laws "be repealed and retired officers placed on a par with others in the matter of filling Federal Government positions."

Officer Retirements

The Army has brought up to date its regulations on retirement of officers with publication of AR 635-130.

This covers all procedures for retirement of commissioned and warrant officers, except for physical disability.

Sperry Award For 1955 To Martin Engineer

The Lawrence Sperry Award for 1955, presented annually by the Institute of the Aeronautical Sciences to a young man who has made a "notable contribution" to the advancement of aeronautics, went to Giles J. Strickroth, an electronics engineer at Martin.

Mr. Strickroth was responsible for the development of the guidance system for the USAF TM-61 Matador tactical missile, and it is for this work that he was presented the award at the Institute's annual meeting in New York 23 Jan.

Mr. Strickroth served on the Matador project at Martin from 1946-52, and was in charge of the missile's guidance system development from 1950-52. He was directly responsible for the development of a system capable of leading the Matador to the desired target after launching.

He also was primarily responsible for the philosophy of unit construction, unit interchangeability, and unit testing on the Matador which provides a highly flexible and wholly mobile missile weapons system in operation.

Allison Completes Its 100,000th Aircraft Engine

The Allison Division of General Motors recently completed its 100,000th aircraft engine, a T-56 turbo-prop, E. B. Newill, division general manager and GMC vice president, announces.

Allison's first aircraft engine production order came from the Army in 1939 for a 1000-horsepower liquid-cooled V1710 engine. During WW II, Allison built more than 70,000 of these engines, or 60 per cent of all the engines supplied Army fighter craft during the war.

Following the Korean War, attention was turned to the turbo-prop engine. The first jet engine in production in this country, the Allison J33, was the first on foreign soil in a Lockheed F-80 Shooting Star.

Today's product on emphasis at Allison is on the T56 turbo-prop military designation of the 501 engine, and the J71 axial-flow turbo-jet. Also in production is the centrifugal flow J33 turbo-jet power plant for the Lockheed T-33 and T2V-1 trainers, used by the Air Force and Navy, respectively.

Former AF PIO Named To Aircraft Industries

Gerald J. McAllister, former Washington chief of Aviation Week magazine, will join the Washington staff of Hill and Knowlton, Inc., public relations counsel, 6 Feb., and will become a member of the staff serving the Aircraft Industries Association.

Announcement of the appointment was made by Mr. Avery McBee, Hill and Knowlton Vice President and Director of Public Relations of Aircraft Industries Association.

Mr. McAllister, 37, attended George Washington University in Washington, D. C., and during WWII served as public relations officer with the 14th Air Force in China and in Air Force headquarters. He has had wide experience, both as a reporter and as an editor and has worked for newspapers in Washington, Florida and Alabama.

His home is in Silver Spring, Md., he is married and has three children.

Airline Cuts Rate For Pacific Travel

Pan American World Airways will cut its fares for military personnel traveling between bases in the Pacific and Alaska areas and the United States beginning 26 February.

Willis G. Lipscomb, Vice President Traffic and Sales, said the reductions will range from 10 to 30 per cent and will apply to Servicemen traveling on authorized leave or furlough at their own expense. The round-trip must be completed within 45 days.

Dependents and families of servicemen are not included in the reductions.

Fairchild Renames Unit Electrotechnics Div.

The American Helicopter Division of Fairchild Engine and Airplane Corporation, situated in Costa Mesa, Calif., has been renamed the Fairchild Electrotechnics Division.

Richard S. Boutelle, Fairchild President, said the name "Electrotechnics" was chosen because it is more appropriate in describing the Division's present activities in the fields of

- (1) resistance-welded, temperature-resistant sandwich material for aircraft;
- (2) automatic instrumentation components and systems for aircraft and industrial applications;
- (3) light weight fiberglass-reinforced plastics microwave "plumbing" for radar systems.

Rotary wing activities of the Corporation's American Helicopter Division (formerly American Helicopter Co., Inc., acquired by Fairchild in 1954) were concluded by the middle of 1955, and its operations concentrated on these programs, which already were in progress.

Mr. Boutelle emphasized that this change did not necessarily mean that Fairchild had dropped its efforts in the rotary wing field. "Our development of a practicable logistics support aircraft capable of short (STOL) or vertical (VTOL) take-off and landing aircraft is now an integrated effort within our Aircraft Division at Hagerstown, Maryland," he said.

Dr. Kantrowitz Elected Avco Vice President

Election of Dr. Arthur R. Kantrowitz as a vice president of Avco Manufacturing Corporation and director of the Avco Research Laboratory, a unit of its Advanced Development Division, has been announced.

Dr. Kantrowitz, who is widely known for his research work in gas dynamics, assumes his new duties 1 Feb. He has taken a leave of absence as professor of aeronautical engineering and of engineering physics at Cornell University.

Dr. Kantrowitz is a specialist in physical gas dynamics, shock waves, and the applications of physics and chemistry of gases to engineering and to astrophysics.

He is an authority on the relationship between the physical and chemical properties of gases and hypersonic aerodynamics. He pioneered at Cornell University in the application of shock tubes to the study of gases in the very high temperature range.

The Avco Research Laboratory is at Everett, Mass., in the Boston metropolitan area.

$110 Million Backlog

Raytheon Manufacturing Company of Waltham, Mass., has announced receipt during December of orders for military products and services in excess of $24,000,000.

According to C. F. Adams, jr., president, the new orders raise the company's backlog of government business to about $110,000,000. He also noted that orders for commercial equipment in December were the largest for any month in the company's history.

The military contracts include orders for such items as radar equipment, power tubes of various types, and special purpose electron tubes for use in military ground computers and in guided missiles and aircraft. Also included are contracts totaling several million dollars for highly classified research and development work to be performed in the company's engineering laboratories.

Overhaul Contract

Two contracts for overhauling aircraft has been awarded by the Air Force to TEMCO's Aircraft Corporation's Greenville, Tex., plant. One contract calls for major overhaul of a "considerable" number of C-64 transports, and the other is for the overhauling of a smaller number of T-6 trainers.

Sec'y Quarles Concedes Loss to Soviets, Says Defense Spending Will Go Higher

Air Force Secretary Donald A. Quarles, in a speech delivered on 25 Jan. before the Bond Club of New York, told how the Air Force will spend about $16.5 billion in the next fiscal year—or about four per cent of the total national economy. He said that “even for Wall Street, these figures are . . . notable.” The Secretary then went on to picture prospects of increased outlays for defense to meet the threat of Soviet gains.

UNFORTUNATELY, I see no reason to believe that our budget can go any lower in the near future. In fact, those of us close to the picture expect defense to become more and more expensive, as the items necessary to that defense grow more complex and the technical competition gets tougher. It does not seem unreasonable to expect, however, that as our national economy continues to expand, and as the economic status of our partners around the world improves, we may be able to finance our defense requirements without a larger proportionate drain on our economy, and thus meet our needs within a balanced Federal budget in the years ahead.

Yet this budget will not provide everything that anyone believes we should have to be ready for any contingency. Many opinions are being expressed that we are dropping behind the Soviets in the strength of our armed forces, and of course this is true even in certain Air Force categories.

We must arrive at our defense expenditures on the basis of what we need, not solely on what the other side has. For instance, General Nate Twinning, our Air Force Chief of Staff, has pointed out that the Soviet air defense problem is much greater than ours. Hence, they may feel they need more interceptor planes than we do. It would be foolish and wasteful of us to gear our programs directly to those of the Soviets.

Let me outline just what kind of an Air Force the new budget will provide for:

First, we will have a Strategic Air Command capable of delivering on an aggressor, in one week, one thousand times as much explosive force as hit Germany in all of World War II.

Second, we will have air defenses of the United States capable of inflicting such losses on attacking bombers that, even by a surprise attack, they cannot hope to destroy our retaliatory forces before they are launched.

Third, we will have tactical air forces capable of striking blows against enemy forces in the field which exceed by many orders of magnitude the total tactical air effort of World War II.

Fourth, we will have a logistic air fleet in MATS capable of executing the airlift necessary to support the combat operations I have described, and troop carrier airlift for swift deployment of Army forces.

Fifth, we will have research and development activities sufficient to insure, so far as human judgment can insure anything, that the capabilities outlined above will remain capabilities in the years to come, though the equipment we use may undergo radical changes.

Sixth, we will have reserve forces ready to carry out their essential roles in time of war or national emergency.

These are the elements of Air Force strength which the Administration budget will provide.

I would like nothing better than to be able to say to you with conviction that if the United States will but maintain its deterrent power for a few more years, peace will be achieved. I cannot say this with conviction. I am convinced that there is no miracle cure for the ills that beset this world. Rather, I think we are confronted with the necessity to support, over an indefinite period, the strength necessary to prevent war.

If this is sound, we should stop thinking of peace as a millenium to be achieved through some miracle, as a resting place in our journey, and think of it instead as a task to be performed painstakingly, year in and year out.

JAG SCHOOL DEGREE

The Army is pushing a legislative proposal which would authorize the Judge Advocate General's School at Charlottesville, Va., to award degrees and academic credits.

The School won provisional approval last year from the American Bar Association for its graduate program. This Association is the national accreditation agency for law schools.

Col. Waters to Belvoir

Col. Charles H. Waters, USA, has been assigned as Assistant Chief of Staff, Comptroller, of The Engineer Center and Ft. Belvoir, Va., replacing Col. Luther F. Cobb, jr., USA, reassigned to Japan following an advanced supply management course at Ft. Lee, Va.

Colonel Waters previously was Army Engineer with the Joint U.S. Military Assistance Group, Thailand.

Army Seeks No New “Air Corps,” Says Gen. Gavin; Stresses Mobility Need

Lt. Gen. James M. Gavin, USA, has taken the occasion of an address before a record-breaking aviation audience to stress that the Army is not seeking to build a new Air Corps, but must be given the aircraft it needs for exploitation of new concepts of warfare.

Speaking on 19 Jan. before the Aviation Writers Association at the National Press Club in Washington, D. C., the Army's Chief of Research and Development traced the Army's use of aircraft since 1907.

He emphasized that new concepts of warfare, with heavy accent on dispersion and mobility, call for integrated use of aircraft under direct control of ground commanders.

General Gavin told the aviation writers that the Army does not intend to compete with the Air Force in development and control of high-speed “sophisticated” aircraft. He said the Army's need is for relatively slow aircraft, which can be used at low levels on an around-the-clock basis.

In this connection, General Gavin recalled that during Exercise Sage Brush late last year in Louisiana, there were occasions when the only aircraft flying were Army planes.

Questioned about the need to amend or rescind the Memorandum of Understanding between the Army and Air Force on the former's use of aircraft, General Gavin suggested that “we've gone off and left it.”

He inferred that developments in such areas as convertiplanes and vertical take-off aircraft have made obsolete the weight limitations for Army aircraft imposed in the Memorandum of Understanding worked out by General J. Lawton Collins, USA, and the late General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, USAF, 1949.

Although General Gavin did not expressly call for repeal of the document, it was apparent from the tenor of his remarks that the Army feels that it is now outdated.

General Gavin said the Army must be capable of moving its troops in a hurry to meet emergency situations and held that a capability must be developed for moving division-size units overseas on quick notice.

He touched briefly on the Army's work in the guided missile field, asserting

LT. GEN. GAVIN points to a model of the Army's new missile, the Redstone. Not until late last week had the Defense Department cleared such a photograph of the Redstone.

that, of course “we will give it everything we've got.”

Among those who heard General Gavin's address were Lt. Gen. Floyd L. Parks, USA, Second Army Commander at Ft. Meade, Md., Maj. Gen. William E. Hall, USAF, and Maj. Gen. Guy S. Meloy, jr., USA, new Army Chief of Information, and Capt. John S. Barleone, jr., USN, who sat at the head table.

Mr. Vern Haughland, aviation editor of the Associated Press and national president of the Aviation Writers Association, presided at the luncheon meeting. LeRoy Whitman, editor of THE JOURNAL, was toastmaster and introduced General Gavin.

Association members said that the audience of more than 150 represented the largest turn-out of its kind for a local A. W. A. luncheon.

Area Rule Extended Into Supersonic Range, NACA Scientists Report at IAS

Extension of the “area rule” principle into the supersonic speed range, leading to marked performance improvement of tomorrow's airplanes, was reported this week by the National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, in two technical papers read at the 24th annual meeting of the Institute of the Aeronautical Sciences in New York City.

The rapid progress made since discovery and experimental verification of the transonic area rule in 1951-52 by Richard T. Whitcomb of NACA's Langley Aeronautical Laboratory resulted from research programs at both Langley and the Ames Aeronautical Laboratories. In this effort to expand the usefulness of the principle, both theoretical and experimental techniques were widely used.

On the experimental side, numerous wind-tunnel, rocket-powered free-flight model, and full-scale flight investigations were made. These demonstrated the effectiveness of the area rule when applied to specific airplane designs under consideration. The transonic and supersonic wind tunnels at the NACA research centers were especially valuable in providing the means to visualize flow conditions around airplane shapes at the speeds under study.

Experimental proof of the area rule's validity immediately resulted in appreciation of the significance of previously neglected theoretical work in which the essence of the principle had existed in the mathematical analyses of linearized supersonic airflow. These analyses had been made over the past decade in efforts to develop aerodynamic theory which would be useful in design of supersonic airplanes. The theoretical work is credited with having contributed importantly to the extension of the area rule from the transonic to the supersonic speed range.

The first of the two papers presented at the I.A.S. meeting was by M. Whitcomb, who last month received the Collier Trophy for his earlier area rule work. In his presentation, Mr. Whitcomb, for the most part, limited his discussion to experimental work performed in the Langley wind tunnels. He gave examples of wind tunnel investigations using wing-body models which showed that, in some instances, application of the area rule was helpful at speeds up to a Mach number of 2 (1320 mph at high altitude), while in others, use of the area rule was relatively ineffective beyond a Mach number of 1.4 (925 mph at high altitude).

The second NACA paper was written by Harvard Lomax and Max A. Heaslet, aeronautical research scientists at the Ames Aeronautical Laboratory. It stated a supersonic area rule, together with a discussion in highly technical terms, of its range of applicability. For those instances where use of the supersonic area rule has resulted in serious errors, the paper gave other methods for calculating mathematically wing-body interference effects.

THE CHAIRMAN SPEAKS

“Perhaps the most insidious weakness a nation can have is complacency. This is the belief that we can do everything better than anyone else. It is something like the popular song called, ‘Anything You Can Do, I Can Do Better.’ We propagandize ourselves in this belief in all sorts of media—advertising month after month that our products are the best and the finest.

“To those who would subscribe to this, I would cite the recent Soviet advances in the development of modern long-range bombers, submarines, jet engines and nuclear weapons.

“Then I would add that: Any conclusion based on a premise that Soviet engineers are not as well qualified as ours just will not hold water. In fact, as I see it, there are no rational grounds to presuppose that American defense technology is invincible.

“According to our estimates, the Soviet system for increasing her scientific and engineering talent is more efficient than ours. It is estimated that within the next ten years, she will have more engineers and scientists than we.

“So far, the skills of their graduates have been largely invested in the development of modern bomber forces, warships, and nuclear weapons. In the meantime, their peoples must wait for that great millenium that the Soviet leaders hold out as a promised reward for their current sacrifices.

“But because of their enforced concentration of technological skills, there is always the grave possibility that the Soviets could develop in some particular field, a weapon more radically advanced than what we have.

“This makes the continuous flow of superior weapons to our military forces a tremendous challenge. It means our research and development programs will have to be prosecuted with even greater vigor.”

—Admiral Arthur Radford, USN, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, from an address delivered 20 Jan. to the Women's Forum on National Security in Washington, D. C.

Services Want To Add Thousands To Regular Establishment

The measure also lifts the current finite limitations on the number of Regular Army and AF general officers on the active list.

One feature of the bill which rules out some applicants specifies that all officers appointed under the plan must be able to complete 25 years of active Federal commissioned service before they reach their 55th birthday.

The immediate objective of the bill (THE JOURNAL, 21 Jan.) is to increase Regular officer ratios in the Army and AF to 36 per cent and in the Navy to 48 per cent during the next two years. The Marine Corps would remain essentially at its present ratio of 50 per cent.

The proposal was introduced in the House by Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.), as HR 8692. Mr. Kilday is Chairman of the House Armed Services Subcommittee which will hold hearings on the measure.

In submitting the plans to increase the ratio of Regular officers in the Armed Services, the Pentagon told Congress "a sizable resource of experienced and well-qualified Reserve officers" who are on active duty or serving in Reserve units are "available to the Armed Forces."

The Defense Department said "many of these aspire to Regular officer status. Enactment of this legislation would provide the necessary authority to obtain the additional numbers of Regular officers needed for a properly balanced officer structure, and one that would enhance career attractiveness, personnel stability and combat effectiveness."

A phased buildup will go into effect as soon as the legislation is enacted. The plan, readied by Defense Secretary Wilson and approved by the President (see chart), sets a 1963 goal which visualizes a 50-50 proportion of Regulars and Reserves in the Navy and Marine Corps, and a 40-60 ratio in the Army and Air Force.

"The decision as to whether or not to increase Regular officer strengths in the Army and Air Force beyond a 40 per cent ratio would be deferred," the Pentagon said, "until such time as those services are approaching a 40 per cent manning level."

The House bill authorizes the Secretary of Defense to establish regulations under which the Regular appointments are to be made.

These regulations will set standards and qualifications for appointment to the grades in which the individuals will receive Regular commissions, and will cover the determination of lineal position and precedence of appointees.

Army and Air Force regulations will prescribe the manner of determining grade, position on the promotion list, seniority in regular grade, and eligibility for promotion. In addition, the two Services will be authorized to adjust the service creditable for promotion and mandatory elimination of officers on the Regular rolls on the effective date of the act. Existing laws already provide such authority for the Navy and Marine Corps.

Service credited for promotion list purposes would be credited as "years' service" under the provisions of section 514 of the Officer Personnel Act of 1947, relating to mandatory retirement or elimination from the active list. However, service which was credited to certain individuals such as doctors, dentists, veterinarians, chaplains and lawyers, to reflect promotion list service credited for their professional education would not be credited for mandatory retirement.

Officers appointed under the act could have their appointments revoked at any time prior to the third anniversary after they accept the appointment.

The measure also provides authority for the appointment to a higher temporary grade of any officer permanently appointed in the Regular Navy or Regular Marine Corps under the act, whose assigned lineal position in grade is contemporary with other officers in the same Regular component holding such higher temporary grade.

The Pentagon said the main purpose of the legislation is to provide "increased stability within the officer corps of each service." Three-fourths of the officers now on active duty are Reservists "serving on a year-to-year basis without the security and recognition of Regular officer status," the Defense Department stated. "Faced with such uncertain prospects, entirely too many of them are leaving military service at the first opportunity, thus creating marked instability within the active duty officer structure."
